End To Congress Session

Democrats Acclaim Record

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress wound up its 1965 work Saturday with Democrats acclaiming its massive legislative record and Republicans contending it had rubber-stamped faulty bills at presidential command.

The debris of an early morning adjournment hardly had been cleared away from the House and Senate chambers before leaders on both sides began talking about what lies ahead in the second session of the 89th beginning Jan. 10.

GOP leaders of the two houses called a news conference to criticize what they characterized as a grist mill grinding out quantity, rather than quality in a session they said was so much under President Johnson's thumb that it recorded "an echo, not a choice."

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois and House Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford of Michigan made it clear they believe their party will benefit in the 1966 elections from mistakes they forecast in administering untried new programs.

They disputed Johnson's estimate that it was "the greatest session of Congress in the history of the nation."

Speaker of the House John W. McCormack, D-Mass., said he was not surprised by the Republican leaders comments.

"This session of Congress has enacted progressive legislation that will strengthen our nation for generations to come," McCormack said, "and it was enacted with the great majority of Republicans opposing it. We expect that because they have not favored any progressive legislation. They haven't changed a bit since the days of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Ambassador To Work Out Exodus Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Swiss Ambassador Emil Stadelhofer flew up from Havana Saturday to work on details for an anticipated exodus of thousands of Cubans to the United States.

The envoy arrived for weekend conferences at the State Department amid Washington optimism that an agreement will be reached soon.

Selhofer declined to predict when an accord would be reached. The Swiss Ambassador to Cuba told newsmen he had asked to come to Washington because he said the status of negotiations now makes it worthwhile to talk things over directly with U.S. authorities here.

The negotiations are "proceeding in a normal way" and he himself has seen Prime Minister Fidel Castro three times, including twice Friday, the Swiss diplomat added.

Just how many will ride the proposed refugee lift to Florida still hinges on how the deal is worked out and how many Cubans decide to leave, U.S. sources said. Estimate range from 20,000 to 55,000.

Because the Swiss represent the United States in Cuba, Stadelhofer has been a middleman in negotiations set off by Castro's Sept. 28 offer to let his countrymen leave and President Johnson's Oct. 3 acceptance.

Such items as the means of transportation, identification and health checks and embarkation facilities are among the details involved in the U.S.-Cuban negotiations as well as the broader question of which refugees should get priority.

Refuse To Testify In Gambling Probe

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The federal grand jury investigating gambling in eastern Missouri has recessed until Nov. 17 after calling 17 witnesses who refused to testify.

The two-day inquiry began Thursday and all witnesses who appeared pleaded the Fifth Amendment. There was no announcement of whether the investigation will be resumed after Nov. 16.

WASHINGTON — Republican Congressional leaders, at a news conference at Capitol Friday, called the newly adjourned session a "hip pocket Congress" that ground out too much quantity and not enough quality. Solution Won't Be Easy

Too Early To Foresee A Reapportionment Answer

By LARRY HALL
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — It's still too early to tell what the Missouri Legislature will do with the House redistricting problem.

Only one thing was clear at the outset of the special session. The Legislature's solution won't be easy and some bitter battles lie ahead.

There is always the outside chance, of course, that the House might wind up in such an impasse that it would be unable to do anything at all.

In this case, the burden of reapportioning the House would fall back on the federal court which originally ordered redistricting on a one man-one vote basis.

The court is reported reluctant to act. If it didn't, the 1966 House candidates would have to run at large — a prospect that makes most of the members shudder because none of the rural members then would have much chance of remaining in office.

Thus far in the nationwide ferment over legislative reapportionment no court has resorted to an at-large election to solve the problem.

It is an axiom in the legislative branch that most bills are passed after a series of compromises.

Some feelers along this line were thrown out by members of the House Reapportionment Committee as they considered Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' proposal to set up a bipartisan commission, appointed by him from nominees submitted by the state party committees.

Gene Walsh, the governor's legal aide, indicated there was little chance for a compromise on the governor's part because he thinks it is a matter of principle that the governor should appoint the commission.

Speaker Thomas D. Graham, D-Cole County, and the majority and minority floor leaders don't like that. They want the legislature itself to have a part in setting up the redistricting commission.

Their proposal for a 20-member commission, chosen by the Democratic and Republican caucuses of the House, will be heard by the Reapportionment Committee next Tuesday afternoon. They appear to be as adamant as the governor.

Talking with the members, you get the idea that neither side has enough votes yet to pass its version.

But sponsors of the governor's plan say that when the chips are down, he'll have the votes. It takes 82 to pass a proposal in the House and he is counting almost that many now.

Graham says he hasn't taken any poll. But at week's end he accused the governor of outrageous arm-twisting to get votes.

"I have never seen such pressure put on as the pressure being used right now by the governor of this state," he said.

Patronage is expected to be a factor in the final outcome.

The governor still has jobs to dispense and a successful legislator must have ready access to many of the executive departments to take care of his constituents.

On the other hand, Speaker Graham has not yet appointed the many interim "study" committees, whose junkets and expense accounts are much sought after by some members. He says he was ready to appoint them but lost his committee list.

Graham denies he is interested in winning so he can be speaker for a fourth straight term—which would be a record. He says the whole thing is a matter of principle and consideration of what's to be imbedded in the constitution for years to come.

It would be extremely chancey to predict the outcome at this point.

But by calling the special session—something he didn't have to do—the governor made the point that he was trying to follow the court's mandate.

Graham, on the other hand, has made it abundantly clear that he is opposed 100 per cent to the court's ruling and at one point cursed the entire Supreme Court. He apologized later but said he still felt the same way.

For Monday's Trip

Schirra, Stafford In Space Practice

CAPE KENNEDY F,la. (AP) — Astronauts Walter Schirra and Thomas Stafford practiced Saturday intricate space maneuvers for their attempt Monday to catch and join with an Agena satellite, a technique which must be perfected before man ventures to the moon.

Command pilot Schirra emphasized the importance of the flight when he said in a recent interview:

"I think we're stalled on the moon trip if we can't rendezvous and dock."

The Gemini 6 pilots spent much of the day in a spacecraft simulator in the control center here. A filmed image of an approaching Agena flashed on a screen gave them a realistic feeling for their historic flight.

All aspects of the mission progressed smoothly toward Monday's space doubleheader which calls for the launching of two rockets on a precise timetable.

The weatherman said there will be clouds over Cape Kennedy on launch day but they should cause no problem.

An Atlas is to boost the Agena into orbit at 10 a.m. A Titan 2 is to follow at 11:41 to hoist Schirra and Stafford on the start of their dramatic space hunt.

Six hours later, high above the Pacific, Schirra is to gently nudge the nose of Gemini 6 into a collar in the nose of the 26-foot-long Agena.

If successful, it will be man's first linkup with an orbiting vehicle and will propel the United States past a significant milestone on the road to the moon.

Schirra and Stafford plan four dockings and undockings, two each, with the target satellite. They will return to earth after one or two days, depending on when the hookups are completed

Schirra, who will steer Gemini 6 through its orbit-shifting maneuvers, calls the mission the most difficult yet tried in the U.S. man-in-space program when he said:

"The reason the whole program is so important is that the whole lunar program is predicated on lunar orbit rendezvous. If we find that the techniques we are working on are unfeasible, this could have a major impact on the whole moon effort.

"Our flight will be the first time we will have a good quantitative look at rendezvous and docking under actual flight conditions."

Injuries Fatal To Stover Man

Bert C. Roberts, 80, Stover, was fatally injured about 5:30 p. m. Saturday when struck by an automobile on State Route 52 in Stover, when he reportedly walked in front of an automobile. He died at the Bothwell Hospital at 8:25 p. m.

The body was taken back to Stover to the Scrivner - Stevinson Funeral Home.

According to the State Highway Patrol, Roberts was starting across the highway in a southerly direction and walked in front of a 1964 Chevrolet coach, driven by David Paul Irwin, 30, Moran, Kan. Roberts was struck by the right front bumper and fender, and his body was thrown on to the hood and into the windshield, shattering it.

Roberts suffered fractures of both legs, of the left arm, severe lacerations about his head and possible rib injuries. He was brought to Sedalia to Bothwell Hospital in a Scrivner-Stevinson ambulance and was accompanied by Dr. Howard Hoffa.

Dr. John Lamy attended Roberts.

The automobile had, what was reported by the Patrol, about $150 damage.

Trooper H. M. Hall, of the State Patrol, Versailles, conducted an investigation of the accident.

Viet Cong Maintains Siege On Town With Mortar Fire

Pounce On Task Force On Way To Give Relief

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — The Viet Cong maintained their seige of Plei Me with mortar shells Saturday night and pounced on a Vietnamese task force 10 miles away that presumably was marching to the relief of the Special Forces garrison.

A U. S. spokesman said the task force was hit on a secondary road northeast of Plei Me in the central highlands 210 miles northeast of Saigon, and the Viet Cong knocked out several of its armored vehicles.

Both sides were on the move elsewhere.

Communist forces assaulted a government unit in Phu Yen Province, between Plei Me and the South China Sea, where several battalions of government troops have been on guard for 10 days to protect the province's rich rice harvest. Air strikes helped break up the Red attack and government casualties were described as light.

Planes also sped to help a government road reconnaissance unit hit Friday in Quang Duc Province, midway between Saigon and Plei Me, by a Viet Cong force estimated to total a battalion — perhaps 500 men. Contact slackened.

U.S. Marines killed five Viet Cong in scattered clashes in the Da Nang and Chu Lai areas on the northeast coast and seized a weapons cache that included four cases of Communist Chinese hand grenades, a spokesman said. He said the Marines suffered light casualties.

A raid by U.S. B52 jet bombers from Guam seemed to be their closest of the war to Saigon, striking suspected Viet Cong installations south of the capital. The explosives appeared to fall only seven to 10 miles away. The previous closest raids were 20 miles away in Saigon.

U.S. supersonic twin-turbojet FbAs, called Freedom Fighters, went into action in Viet Nam for the first time. Two attacked a suspected Viet Cong concentration 30 miles northeast of Saigon in the D-zone jungle. A forward air controller said the two blanketed the target with 90 per cent of their explosive cargo —two tons of bombs.

The Sedalia Pettis County United Fund drive has passed the half-way mark in its goal of $79,833. Latest figures tabulat- contribution at $40,090.24 with a balance remaining on the goal as $39,795.

Harry Kull, campaign chairman, stressed that there is still a great deal of money not reported to the section chairman of the United Fund office. Kull urges that every citizen make a contribution so that "Sedalia can hold her head up in this worthwhile effort."

The drive is scheduled to end Wednesday.

Wilkins Is Resting At His Home

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Collie Leroy Wilkins Jr., 22, Ku Klux Klansman acquitted in a civil rights slaying, rested at his suburban Fairfield home Saturday, shielded by parents who are convinced he was framed.

"I'm just glad it's over," said his mother, Mrs. Leroy Wilkins, who accompanied her son to his trial in Hayneville, Ala., where he faced first-degree murder charges in the highway slaying last March 23 of a white civil rights volunteer Viola 'Gregg Liuzzo of Detroit.

Wilkins was pointed out by Gary Thomas Rowe, an FBI informer, as the trigger man in the Liuzzo death. Wilkins was freed by a white, male jury Friday. The verdict brought cheers from court-room spectators.

"I hadn't raised my boy to go out on a lonely highway to do something like that," Mrs. Wilkins, mother of four children, said. "I always felt like that. I felt like my boy was framed in this, I always felt it was conspiracy."

She said her son, who has had no comment on the trial, needs rest and quiet. The phone began ringing early Saturday, and young Wilkins got little sleep, if any, she said.

The Wilkins house is a three-bedroom, single-story frame dwelling in Fairfield, a suburban area mainly populated by industrial and steel workers. Many neat lower and middle-income homes dot the area. U.S. Steel Corp.'s Fairfield works are there.

There is a slum area on one edge, largely populated by Negroes. Willie Mays, star center fielder of the San Francisco Giants, was born in that section.

Wilkins, like his father, is an auto mechanic but now is unemployed. During summer months cars are brought to his home for repairs, or he makes house calls. In the winter, however, he rarely has any work.

"He's a good mechanic," Mrs. Wilkins said. "He can just listen to a car and tell you what's wrong with it."

Third Person Injured

Car-Truck Crash Takes Two Lives

Two persons were killed and a third was injured but not seriously in a headon collision between a Chevrolet two-ton truck and a Chevrolet sedan, six miles south of Lincoln on U.S. Highway 65 about 4:20 p.m. Saturday. A Sedalia woman, identified as Betty Schultz, 39, 1415 East Boonville, was one of the victims The other was a man whose name was given as Chester Leon Golden, 32, Hermitage, formerly of Tuscon, Ariz., riding in the same car. The driver of the truck was Leon Steven Sessler, 18, Fulton.

Sessler, driving a two-ton 1963 Chevrolet truck, owned by Tommy Moore of Fulton, was brought to the Bothwell Hospital and treated by Dr. Donald Eldenberg. He complained of a back injury, and after x-rays were taken was admitted to the hosital for further observation.

Sessler said at the hospital that he was headed south and when he came over a hill, saw the car approaching, going north but in its proper lane. He said that as the car neared, the vehicle suddenly swerved in front of the truck into his lane and they crashed.

Both Golden, reported to have been the driver of the 1960 Chevrolet sedan, and Mrs. Schultz were killed instantly. The sedan was crushed and the front end ripped away. The top of the car was ripped and smashed down on the victims, Mrs. Schultz apparently being thrown backward and her body pinned between the top and the top of the back seat.

The two victims were reported to have suffered skull fractures, broken necks and their bodies crushed.

Sgt. Glenn Means, Warsaw, of the State Highway Patrol who investigated the accident, said "It was one of the worse crashes I have seen in my area." Means reported so terrific was the impact that the motor of the vehicle was thrown out, the top crushed down, and it was necessary to practically rip it open to get the bodies out of the car.

He said the accident occurred just over the crest of the hill and north curve going in to the Lays flats.

Means also said the truck was pulling a grain elevator behind it and as the vehicles crashed the elevator broke loose and went off the highway doing some damage to it. "The sedan was demolished," Means said, "and the truck was extensively damaged on the front end."

The bodies were taken to the Fred Davis and Son Funeral Home in Lincoln, where identification were confirmed by relatives Saturday night.

Golden had been residing in Hermitage since last July with his mother, Mrs. Lucille V. Jones. He formerly resided in Tucson, Ariz., and was in the Air Force stationed for some time at the Whiteman A.F.B. in 1958.

He is survived by his mother and three children in Tuscon. Tentative plans are to take the

Fabulous Record Has Been Written

WASHINGTON (AP) — The "fabulous 89th Congress," as President Johnson describes it, has written an historic record in its first session.

With top-heavy Democratic majorities, it rolled out a tide of major legislation that often drew comparisons with the New Deal days of the 1930s

It set up a permanent health care program for the elderly, made it easier for Negroes in the South to register to vote, wiped out taxes on dozens of items bought by nearly all Americans, provided more than $1 billion to improve education for disadvantaged children.

It broke down bars to immigration, set up regional centers to bring to all parts of the country the newest techniques for fighting major diseases and provided federal grants for writers, painters, composers and other artists.

Its biggest claim to fame appeared to rest on:

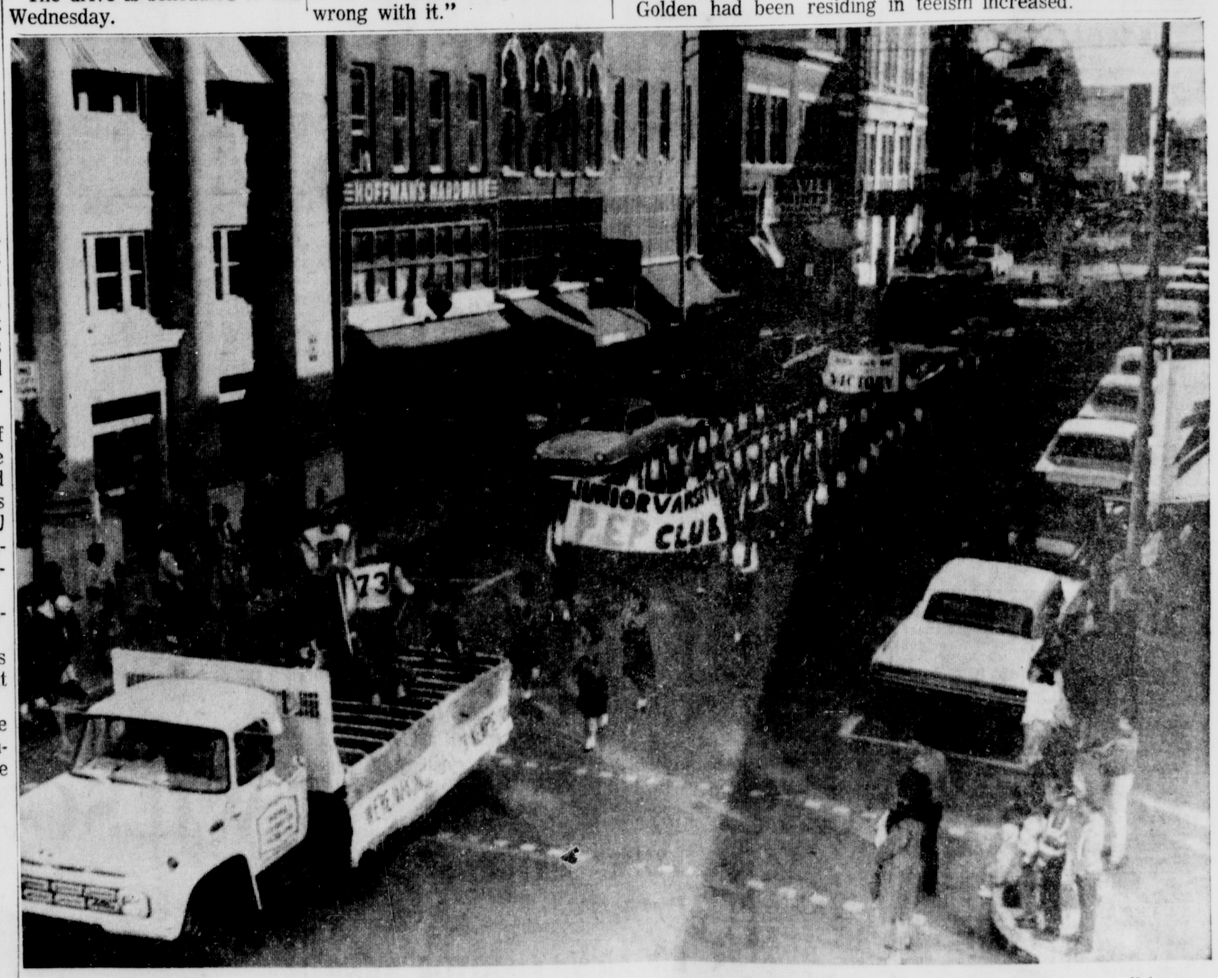

1. The $6.5-billion Social Security bill, passed in July, that sets up a broad program of health care for Americans over 65. It also raised all regular Social Security benefits.

2. The $1.3-billion education bill, enacted in April, containing the broadest aid program for the nation's grade and high schools ever to clear Congress. Children from poor families are to benefit most.

3. The voting rights bill, passed in August, suspending literacy tests and permitting federal registrars in much of the South. Registrars already are at work registering Negroes in 20 Deep South counties.

Most of the major legislation was passed before Labor Day, the target adjournment date set early in the year by Senate and House leaders.

But the session dragged on for eight weeks beyond that time, developing a sense of anticlimax and frustrating many members. Some of the President's bills had tougher going in the closing weeks as absenteeism increased.

HEADS PARADE — The Senior Class of Smith-Cotton High School headed the annual Homecoming parade as it wound its way through downtown Sedalia Friday afternoon. Eight floats were entered in the parade, along with the bands, football team, and the queen and her attendants.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I am a 17-year-old girl who agrees with what you said about that high school boy who put blonde streaks in his hair. This is not just my own opinion, but the opinion of every girl I have talked to today.

We all feel that boys are becoming too feminine. A boy who would streak his hair is repugnant, abhorrent, insufferabble, repulsive, nauseating, loathesome, offensive, disgusting and icky.

How can males expect females to respect them if they get themselves up to look like women? Don't they realize their greatest attraction is that they are the opposite sex? ou have my permission to print my letter and I hope you do. — THUMBS DOWN ON BLEACHED BLONDE BOYS

Dear Thumbs. Thanks for your views. And how I'd like to remind you girls that your greatest attraction is that you are members of the opposite sex.

Girls who get themselves up to look like boys are repugnant, abhorrent, insufferable, repulsive, nauseating, loatesome, offensive, disgusting and icky

Dear Ann Landers: For the past three days I've received a telephone call between 11 and 11:15 a. m. A cultured voice says, "I think you should know your husband is having an affair with his office manager." Then I hear a click and the party leaves the line.

I've never had cause to suspect my husband of stepping out on me. He comes straight home from work and rarely goes anywhere without me.

His office manager is a divorced woman who is raising three children. She is dignified and reserved and has worked for my husband for five years.

I know I should put these calls out of my mind but I can't. I haven't told my husband because it might upset him. The phone company says they can't trace a call unless the party stays on the line for 20 minutes. I need some guidance. — UNNERVED

Dear Unnerved: Tell your husband some nut has been calling you with a wild story about him and his office manager and you think he should be aware of it. Then get an unlisted phone number.

Dear Ann Landers: I asked for your advice four years ago and didn't take it. Today I am writing to tell you I am sorry. When you advise other girls not to force a marriage because a baby is on the way, I hope they will listen to you.

I was only 16, scared, ignorant and so ashamed of having disgraced my family that I couldn't hold my head up, much less give them an argument. My father went to see Dan's father and they practically dragged him to the justice of the peace.

Our marriage has been a living hell from the beginning. Dan walks in and out of our flat without telling me where he's going. He gets phone calls from girls who think I am his sister. They leave telephone numbers and ask that he call back. I can't count the number of times I've washed lipstick out of his shirts. Dan doesn't care about the baby and says she may not be his.

Our pastor called the situation hopeless and says I should divorce Dan and start life over. If I had listened to you I could have saved myself four years of agony, and my baby could have a decent home with both a mother and a father. Please print my letter. It may help someone else. — STUBBORN AND SORRY

Dear Sorry: Unfortunately many people have to get their own lumps. They don't learn any other way. I hope the future holds brighter days for you and the little one. Good luck.

Still Eying 'Dolly' Show In Russia

TOKYO (AP) — Lucy Jarvis, the Emmy-winning television producer, was in Seattle doing a show on the artificial kidney when NBC called her in to chronicle the trials and triumphs of Mary Martin and "Hello, Dolly!" overseas.

Sponsored by the State Department, Miss Martin, produced David Merrick and the entire American cast of 81 were scheduled to play in Japan then move on to the Soviet Union and London.

The network, which has the vivacious musical comedy star under contract, decided that this would make prime viewing material for a one-hour color show to be presented next February.

Miss Jarvis, whose show "The Louvre" walked away with top honors in the Emmy competition this month, left the artificial kidney and headed for New York.

There she met Merrick, America's most successful producer.

Merrick thought, said Lucy, that the show would be "a smashing idea." In Cleveland, where Lucy caught her, Miss Martin's reaction was, "This is marvelous."

Shortly afterward Lucy headed for Moscow, a natural assignment since several years earlier her winning ways with Nikita S. Khrushchev had succeeded in getting an NBC crew and cameras into the Kremlin for a show.

She arrived in the Soviet capital just as the boom had fallen — the "Hello, Dolly!" tour of the Soviet Union was being canceled.

Lucy's disappointment was deep, but she hasn't given up. "We may still do it," she said.

She added: "One of the reasons I was so desperately disappointed was that here would be one American gal who would love them and they'd love her. Mary is America. Besides, she adores caviar. She could eat it by the pailful."

Lucy got to Tokyo two days before Mary, Merrick and the cast arrived. The arrival shots almost turned into a nightmare, she says now.

The only major lady producer in American television, Lucy studied home economics in college, says, "It is the basis of all philosophy."

What makes a successful producer? "You've got to be there. There is no substitute for that," she said. "And you've got to be willing to cut, to have no patience for anything bad."

File Suit Against Senate Plan

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — State Republican Chairman Ethan H. Campbell and a group of other Republicans filed suit in Cole County Circuit Court Thursday, charging the recent redistricting of the state Senate was invalid and illegal.

In their suit they say the districts aren't as compact and contiguous as they should be, Gov. Warren E. Hearnes had no legal right to set up the commission at this time and the commission didn't allow local election boards to set up the districts which lie wholly within a county or city.

Meanwhile Atty. Gen. Norman H. Anderson ruled the legislature is not bound by the specific detail from Gov. Hearnes on how the House should be redistricted.

Only the subject of redistricting is before the legislature, Anderson said in a legal opinion. The legislature can either set up a redistricting plan or fail to do so. But it must try.

Anderson supplied the opinion for Reps. Mel Carnahan, D-Phelps County, and Ronald M. Belt, R-Macon County, majority and minority floor leaders. They have teamed up with Speaker Thomas D. Graham, D-Cole County, in insisting the House must have a direct hand in the establishment of any redistricting commission.

The governor, on the other hand, wants to use the same system as was used in senatorial redistricting — a bipartisan commission named by him from panels submitted by the party committees.

Boat's Arrival a Holiday For Upper Amazon Regions

By JAMES D. BOWMAN

Aboard the Amazon Steamer Lauro Sodre (AP) — It all began, says Indian folklore, when a big tree toppled over.

It would have been a tree some 3,690 miles tall, standing on the shores of the Atlantic near the port city of Helem, Brazil.

And it fell with a bang, its trunk and branches smashing out the depressions which became the Amazon and its tributaries.

The tip grazed the Peruvian Andes scarcely 100 miles from the Pacific.

The rains came, the leaves turned to fish, and the world's mightiest river basin was born.

So goes the legend of one Indian tribe which has roamed the jungles of the upper Amazon since long before the white man knew of the river and its 200 lesser streams.

And except for a few sprinklings of civilization, the upper Amazon and its thousands of square miles of unmapped jungle remains the wild, primitive area of Stone Age man.

"The most fascinating thing is that we actually know so very little about the jungle and its riches," says Peruvian air force Maj. Orlando Castillo Gomez.

Castillo heads a work crew assigned to carve out 17 landing strips in the jungle under a Peruvian foothold development plan.

Few differ with Castillo's belief that the Amazon jungle holds great stores of wealth. There is argument only as to how to get to it and get it out.

Man can penetrate the jungle only a few miles in from the river's edge. He must hack his way with a machete and travel on his own two feet.

He can take out only what he can carry on his back.

It is the very conditions that created the Amazon's riches that bar the way to their exploitation.

Rainfall in some parts of the Amazon basin measures up to 200 inches a year. Temperatures, while balmy and pleasant on the river at night, hit humid 90s by day.

There are no rural roads, no railroads and few airstrips.

There is only the Amazon, a great cocoa-colored highway slashing through the endless tropical rain forests, always in a rush to dump its estimated four billion cubic feet of water into the Atlantic every second of every minute.

The Amazon varies in width from one to six miles from Peru to the Atlantic, forever twisting and churning out new channels.

Only a few yards back from the steep clay banks the dense belt of green, towering several hundred feet high, marches off into oblivion.

Within it lurk only the Indians unknown to the white man and the beasts of the bush—the jaguars, ocelots, wild pigs, boa constrictors, anacondas.

There are harmless spiders the size of a man's hand and deadly ones no bigger than his fingernail.

A traveler today, if he should stick to his boat, could journey the length of the river without spotting anything wilder than the playful freshwater porpoise which delights in showing off its aquatic skills.

The alligator and his smaller cousin, the cayman, is a nocturnal creature. He hides out by day and prowls only at night.

The inland natives of Amazonian Brazil, Colombia and Peru, cluster in thatched-hut villages along the river's edge. Only the river offers transportation, a market for their animal hides and tropical fruits, and supplies from the mysterious outside world.

Arrival of the Lauro Sodre, its shrill whistle piercing from around the bend, sounds the signal for a village holiday. The Lauro Sodre is a 500-ton passenger-cargo vessel which plies the 2,300-mile stretch of the Amazon from Belem to Iquitos, Peru.

It has been more than a month since the vessel's last call. She brings a few letters for those who can read, and fine treats from the three distant cities of the Amazon — Belem, Manaus and Iquitos.

Traders dart up in canoes offering bananas, small animals, fish and perhaps a snapping turtle measuring some three feet across its black shell.

For the village, the ship brings rice, sugar, coffee and other supplies.

There is some trading, the whistle sounds, and the villagers scurry ashore to wait the next visit of the Lauro Sodre.

Capt. Humberto Vale Spessirits starts his downstream run from the sleepy Peruvian jungle town of Iquitos at noon the day after loading.

Cruising at a 15-knot clip with the current, the voyage to Belem on the far side of the South American continent takes about nine days plus stops.

Spessirits has spent more than half of his 41 years on the Amazon and its tributaries, along with a brief stint as a coastal pilot.

Few foreign tourists venture up the Amazon. Those that do seldom speak any Portuguese, and the ship's officers and crew speak little else.

Some Children Smile

Faces Of The Old Reflect Plight of Viet Refugees

By RONALD I. DEUTSCH

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — By the thousands, old men, women and children — many without enough food — huddled in makeshift shelters during the week waiting for help.

The children could still manage a smile as they squatted in the mud in a dilapidated sugar mill, long since abandoned, in a community near Saigon. But the faces of the old men and women reflected their plight as refugees of the Vietnamese war.

"The problem is how to turn national drain into gain," said a U. S. aid official. "The South Vietnamese government hasn't been able to do the job."

The number of refugees in South Viet Nam is a subject of dispute, but they are increasing and becoming the nation's ranking social problem. Some are victims of Viet Cong terrorism, some have fled America's air strikes and artillery barrages.

The government, with firm prodding from the United States and private agencies, is being pushed into tightening its aid program to these people. Yet it has been able to provide little more than a subsistence level of food and shelter for them.

President Johnson is known to have given the refugee problem a high priority. A 15-man team of experts arrived in Saigon last week to direct U. S. assistance to the refugees under the Agency for International Development.

One of the biggest criticisms of the aid program, as administered by the Saigon government's Ministry of Social Welfare, is its spottiness. Bureaucratic delays in Saigon and a lack of planning and trained personnel are blamed.

"Where is the money going?" asked an American AID employe who works with refugees in the provinces. "It doesn't seem to be getting to the people."

Under the government program, each refugee receives the equivalent of 10 cents a day and a rice ration. The refugee is allowed $48 and a rice ration for six months when he is resettled. The government aim is to resettle the refugees as quickly as possible, but many of them have no place to go.

One encouraging sign is that many refugees who flocked from Viet Cong territory to the more than 200 refugee camps are no longer suspicious. They believe the government at least has their interests in mind.

Latest government figures put the refugee total at nearly 700,000. But of this number, more than 250,000 have resettled, many in their native villages. Vietnamese officials say the refugees are increasing by 4,000 to 7,000 each week and may total one million before the end of the year.

Selectmen Pay Debt; Queen Elizabeth Receives Peppercorn

NEW CASTLE, N.H. (AP) — Selectmen say its about time they started paying a back debt to Queen Elizabeth II, and sent her a long overdue dry berry of black pepper.

The berry, called a peppercorn in colonial says, was sent in a letter to the queen because the selectmen said they wished "to preserve and improve relations between the United States and Great Britain."

In 1693, King William and Queen Mary granted New Castle a charter with a stipulation that on each Oct. 21 and "forever" one peppercorn be paid to the British as a franchise fee.

Use Grid Methods To Draw Students to the Big Band

MOREHEAD, Ky. (AP) — "Let's go. Get down to that 20-yard line. Fast! Fast!"

Down the football field come two lines of young people.

The grass shreds along the sideline where Fred Marzan walks. His pipe bounces in the pocket of a brown shirt now past the saturation point. At his whistle, the lines halt.

"Everybody to the showers. And everybody back in two hours."

Football practice? No, another field drill for the Morehead State College Band.

The 150 bandsmen at this school of 4,300 near the northern tip of the Cumberland National Forest were hand-picked by Marzan. Now in his 10th year here, Marzan has borrowed some of a football coach's techniques to attract the students, recruiting and scholarships.

"It's quite frankly a recruiting job," said Marzan, 40, a native of Pittsburgh. "I started with a 17-piece outfit. It took some bush-beating for a while. We had to stimulate an interest, let them know that we had something to offer them—an education, a chance to develop a talent, the knowledge they could take back to their home communities and teach to others."

Students on scholarship are required to maintain a B grade average. The school furnishes instruments to those who cannot afford to buy them. Many of the bandsmen come from the tobacco and mountain country. Some of them have had extensive musical instruction, others have never worked with a music teacher.

Marzan and his staff of nine teachers and graduate student aides spend a week preparing music and equipment for the "basic training" of a band camp before the start of the school year. The bandsmen then work a 12-hour day for six days to whip their basic program into shape.

Practice sessions are conducted daily during the school year, usually at least 90 minutes of group work and then individual practice as needed.

"I work them hard and demand quality, Marzan said. 'The band has a new routine for each home football game and usually goes to at least one of the school's road games. During the rest of the year it plays on tour in parades in the region and holds concerts on campus.

Indian Prime Minister Seeks Self-Sufficiency

By CONRAD FINK

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Lal Bahadur Shastri is telling the ragged and underfed of India's 480 million people: Hold up your head and act proud.

Behind the prime minister's appeal is a desire to build a war machine and a supporting civilian economy that will not have to depend on outside help for anything.

India, he says, must be independent and self-sufficient, able to fight and live on what it can produce itself.

If India is to fashion its own destiny, he says, the country must be free of the fetters and restrictions that go with reliance on outside help.

Shastri began this campaign after the September conflict with Pakistan had showed how vulnerable foreign aid had made India's strategists and diplomats.

Much of the army's equipment comes from abroad, as does the food eaten by hundreds of thousands of Indians. Heavy pressure to stop the conflict was brought on India by aid suppliers.

This inspired a revulsion against India's dependence on foreign aid, and Shastri has done his best to keep it alive.

Foreign aid — $6 billion since 1951 from the United States alone — has been accepted as India's due. Wheat shipments totaling 20,000 tons a day from the United States are considered routine.

Shastri's goal of self-sufficiency clearly is a long way off.

India's foreign exchange reserves have almost vanished; a food crisis is in the offing, and the nation's anemic industry needs continued transfusions of foreign help.

But the response to Shastri's appeal so far has been good. Molders of public opinion — newspapers, educators, literate village leaders — are backing the prime minister.

Government economists and planners, heretofore jealously protective of India's small beginnings in industry, are diverting all necessary resources to agriculture and defense.

The question is whether Shastri can maintaint his drive for self-sufficiency once there is a slackening in the fervent patriotism and nationalism inspired by the war with Pakistan.

Military Age Men Kept Back By Cuban Boss

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—Refugees are leaving Cuba by the hundreds but Prime Minister Fidel Castro says men of military age will be kept behind.

The arrival of more than 350 refugees aboard 26 small boats in the Florida Keys Thursday ended a two-day lull in the exodus. Twenty-three arrived aboard two small boats early today.

New arrivals said more than 200 boats are waiting to sail emigrants the 90 miles to Key West.

Twenty-seven refugees and three crewmen crowded into the 20-foot motorboat Cherokee. Despite 80-degree heat, refugee Pablo Martinez Vera clutched an old brown wool overcoat.

"This is in case they send me up north," he said.

The new arrivals brought to more than 1,000 the number who have fled since Oct. 10.

One new arrival, Juvenal Montesino, said, "I just made it; I'll be 14 years old in 10 days."

Youths 14 to 27 are required to complete their military service in Cuba.

Flag Flies All Day

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has passed and sent to the White House a bill to permit the U.S. flag to be flown 24 hours each day on the green in Lexington, Mass. — the site of the first confrontation of the Minutemen with the British in the Revolutionary War.

Must Have License

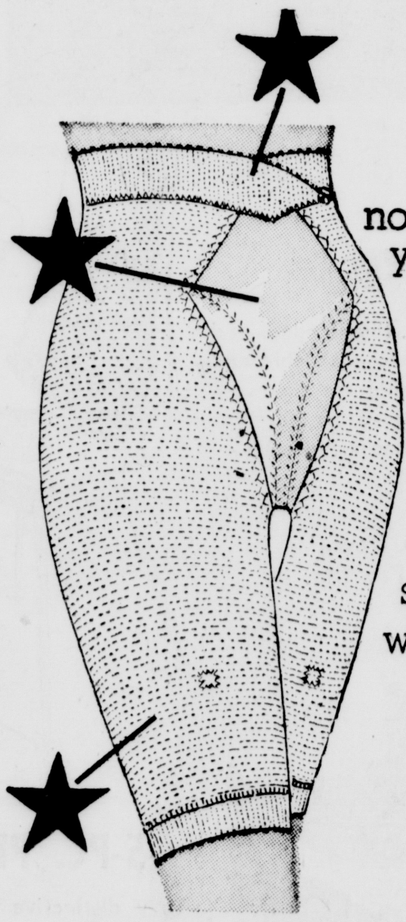

BLOOMFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Town Clerk H. Joseph North says all Christmas tree vendors, including charitable organizations, will be required to buy transient merchant licenses costing $100 this holiday season. In the past the licensing fee has been waived.

Biggest Unsolved Problem Is Getting Lunch Money

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the biggest unsolved problems of the American husband today is how to get more luncheon money from his wife.

Here and there you still find an old-fashioned male who controls the family finances and puts his wife on a skimpy household allowance for which she must render to him strict accounting.

But in most homes it operates the other way. The husband meekly brings home his weekly paycheck in his mouth. His wife, after patting him on the head, deposits the check in the bank.

Then she is in charge of the spending. Some wives on Monday give their husbands the funds that are supposed to last them through the week.

Such wives usually are newlyweds. Older wives know this system doesn't work. They have found out from experience that if they give a husband his full allowance on Monday he'll be broke by Wednesday morning — and whining for more.

So they dole it out daily.

But some husbands seem to be in a rebellious mood about their luncheon allowances, judging by a bull session at an office water cooler I overhead recently.

"I've been married 25 years and in that time the boss has given me five merit raises," volunteered a marital veteran. "But how many merit raises has my wife given me in that time? Not one.

"A quarter of a century ago she started giving me 50 cents a day for lunch, and it was okay then. I could get a three-course dinner for 45 cents, and that left me with a nickel to buy a cigar afterwards.

"But she still gives me only four-bits a day, and nowadays you're lucky to get a peanut butter sandwich for that."

"I know what you mean," remarked another husband. "The only way I've been able to stay alive is to shake a couple of quarters out of my kid's piggy bank every night and put in a couple of washers to replace them. But that can't go on much longer. The kid's getting wise."

"My wife thinks I'm keeping another woman on the dough she gives me for lunch," said a third. "But if I had a mistress who ate like a bird, I couldn't afford her — because I don't have enough to supply her with bird seed."

In the long run, however, the wives are really hurting themselves. If the average husband isn't passed out a little more folding money to buy himself a decent midday meal, he soon won't be able to bring home the bacon — because he won't have the strength to tote it.

Tour Groups Get Glimpse Of New Life In Indonesia

By DON HUTH

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — If your travel agent can't come up with any other intriguing suggestion, try a coup crisis in Indonesia.

It's well run by the army, with a minimum of inconveniences to the public during the day. At night there is no difficulty — the capital is locked up tight at 7 p.m.

Tour groups can catch a demonstration or the burning of some Communist headquarters almost daily. The time schedule varies.

A demonstration or burning is well organized. Troops are on hand to keep anyone from interfering with the demonstrators. They step in only if it looks as if someone will get hurt.

Americans and British will find a pleasant change in Jakarta. New signs appearing in the city do not read. "Down With Capitalism" and, "Crush the Imperialists and Neocolonialists."

The fences have been freshly painted with "Kill Aidit" and "Crush the PKI." D.N. Aidit is the Communist boss and PKI is the designation of the Indonesian Communist party.

The U.S. Embassy now is a pleasant place to visit. Demonstrators passing by used to shout threats. Now they are heard to say, "Long live America." It is so peaceful that the government does not even reinforce the guard at the U.S. Embassy when a demonstration is scheduled in the city.

Taxis will take you to any part of the city — provided streets have not been blocked off by armored cars or obstructed by soldiers on their daily rounds of arresting Communists.

President Sukarno's palace, one of the many he has around Indonesia, is a little difficult to see.

Barbed-wire barricades surround it, front and back. The streets are securely blocked off.

Accommodations are excellent at the plush Hotel Indonesia. Of course you cannot telephone anywhere outside the hotel because communications have not been restored since the coup. Room service is limited. Laundry facilities are slow. The main dining room and coffee shop are operating. The one bar does a roaring business.

The hotel has a captive audience from 7 p.m. to 6 a.m. The longer you stay in the hotel the better acquainted the residents become. Strangers say hello to each other like old friends solely because they see each other day in and day out.

A guest with no place to go keeps pacing the lobby and shopping arcade to keep the waistline down.

Entertainment is provided in the dining room by a folk singer, an Indonesian dance troupe and a band. Guests do not have to stay long before they are singing along with the folk singer or repeating the Indonesian dances without a misstep.

Money is a little hard to handle but if rupiahs are kept in 10,000 denominations, pockets and purses do not bulge too much. The rate is 17,300 rupiahs to $1.

April Revolt Only a Part Of Dominican Revolution

ican Republic (AP) — The first shot of a Dominican revolution was fired the night dictator Rafael Leonidas Trujillo was slain four years ago. The last is still in the future.

This is an evaluation of this stricken little country's situation by some Dominicans who regard the April revolt merely a phase in the post-Trujillo struggle against despotic rule from the left or right.

The nature of this conflict was exposed by the cold-blooded killing last Saturday of Angel Severo Cabral, 56, a leading conservative politician. Leftist extremists, against whom Cabral acted vigorously while interior minister three years ago, are believed responsible for his death.

The incident was preceded and followed by a wave of violence whose unrestricted range underlined an absence of civilian authority. There is hardly any question that the life of the provisional government depends entirely on the presence of the Inter-American Peace Force.

Most foreign observers and many Dominicans agree that without armed forces of the Organization of American States behind it, the government would be toppled in a battle for power between the Dominican military and still well-armed rebel partisans.

The far right claims to have an armed vigilante corps of more than 500. Rebel leaders at one time claimed to have 12,000 armed partisans. The "army" they offered for integration in the regular armed forces numbered less than 1,500. The weapons they turned over to the OAS amount to a trickle of what military authorities claim the rebels took from army arsenals in April.

The deteriorating situation is believed the motive behind the governments decision to crack down on civilians illegally in possession of weapons. But implementing the law may be difficult.

Civilian authority has been abused in this country. Law enforcement has become discredited. The Dominicans' negative reaction to law enforcement, a product of 31 years of Trujillo repression, appears to have swung over to the extreme of anarchy, particularly among the underprivileged classes.

Rebel leaders, asked about looting and vandalism in their sector during the revolution, explained it was impossible to control without force and they would not resort to that.

First United Effort Was Held In 1887

The first United Campaign for health and welfare like the one underway here now, was held in 1887, wrote W. H. Wheeler, Jr., national Community Campaigns of America, to the director of the Pettis County United Fund, when four clergymen of different faiths, two Protestants, a Jew and a Catholic, got together in Denver to combine 23 separate charitable appeals.

Those four men, with differing faiths but of the same moral convictions endowed the United Way with a spiritual quality which has nurtured its growth and added to its greatness.

The United Way of fund raising for social advancement in America, he pointed out, is the most successful example in the world of what can be achieved by cooperation. It underlies all joint efforts for human progress in all fields, he said.

Wheeler commented that he happened to be one of those who believes that all religions stem from the same God who put his great spiritual potential in the souls of all men, and man created his religions as necessary and important symbolic and motivating institutions shaped by many cultural and environmental influences, but morally almost identical today.

It is significant to reflect that some 4,000 years before the birth of Christ, he said, these words were engraved in Sanscrit, "All that you will hold in your dead hands, is that which you have given away."

But regardless of its orgin, man's God given spirit has won over wars, pestilence, famines, despots, and periods of moral disintegration have sometimes threatened his very existence, Wheeler stated. It has created the standars of morals and ethics by which man's conscience measures his actions.

Morality — concerning ourselves with someone else's welfare, someone less fortunate than we — is what our United Campaign is, of course, all about.

We would go a long way toward establishing a better society and a better world if more of us used our imaginations and saw beyond our personal horizons. We do not suffer as much from a personal lack of moral instinct as we do from astigmatism in its application.

It is the recognition of the common struggle for greater morality, individually and collectively, which is the basis of man's community and cooperation.

In his letter he wished the Pettis County drive the best of luck.

● Accidents

John W. Parkhurst, 28, Hughesville, suffered severe injuries to his head, late Saturday evening while cutting down a tree at the residence of Wayne Shoemaker.

According to information, Parkhurst was using a chain saw to cut the tree when he was struck by a dead limb which broke loose and fell from the tree.

He was brought to Sedalia in a Ewing ambulance and taken to the Bothwell Hospital where he was treated by Dr. H. O. Wilbur.

Both cars involved in a two-car accident in the 600 block of West Broadway were damaged at 1:32 p.m. Saturday.

A 1957 Buick, driven by Bobby Dean Huffman, 20, 1219 West Tenth, collided with a parked 1962 Ford, owned by Sherman L. Robertson, Smithton.

Damage was to the left front of the Huffman car and to the right front of the Sherman auto.

No one was injured in a two-car accident involving a Sedalia police car at 2:20 p.m. Friday at Seventh and Engineer.

Police car No. 7, a 1964 Dodge, was driven by Officer Herbert S. Mayfield, 45, 2201 East 12th.

The patrol car was in collision with a 1962 Chevrolet, driven by John Wesley McHoney, 72, 201 East Walnut. According to the accident report McHoney tried to make a left turn in front of Mayfield.

Damage was to the front of the police car and to the right side of the McHoney car.

McHoney was issued a police summons for careless and imprudent driving and is to appear in police court, Oct. 27.

The 500 block of South Limit was the scene of a one-car accident at 12:15 p.m. Friday.

The driver of a 1964 Ford, James O. Richwine, 21, 2245 East Broadway, stated that the right side of his car struck the curb when he attempted to avoid another driver changing lanes in front of him.

The right front and rear of the car were damaged.

● Circuit Court

A $5,000 civil damage suit was filed Friday in Circuit Court in behalf of a Sedalian, who alleges another Sedalia man attacked him here on Aug. 8, 1964.

Jesse Taylor, 201 North State Fair, names Wesley Bunce, 908 South Vermont, as defendant in the suit.

Taylor says Bunce assaulted and beat him at or near a cafe near 16th and Missouri and as a result the plaintiff contends he was "terrified, shocked and humiliated" and suffered injuries.

Jack C. Terry and Phillip Baker, Independence, are attorneys for the plaintiff.

Opposition End Urged By Council

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP) — The National Council of Churches' World Order Study Conference urged Saturday that the United States end its opposition to seating Red China in the United Nations.

About 500 delegates to the conference asked that the U. S. take the step "without prejudice to its own policy of diplomatic recognition."

A similar action in 1958 by the study conference resulted in widepsread criticism of the National Council of Churches even though the council's general board did not act on the declaration.

The Red Chinese recommendation this time stipulated that the position of Nationalist China (Taiwan) should not be compromised by admitting the Red Chinese to United Nations membership.

That recommendation was one of several dealing with so-called Christian approaches to world problems passed as the conference ended.

The recommendations and the reports of various committees on international problems will be presented to the general board of the national church council when it meets Dec. 2-3 at Madison, Wis.

Delegates to the conference also recommended to the national council that:

—United States bombing of North Viet Nam be halted "for an indefinite period in an effort to create more favorable circumstances for negotiations."

—The South Vietnamese government "immediately. . . begin negotiations for a cease fire agreement including cessation of terrorist activities."

—Member churches recognize the right of the individual to protest government policies or actions.

—Freedom for Rhodesia be supported "only when effective guarantees are provided for participation of the African majority in the government."

—The U. S. take unilateral steps toward free travel between the U. S. and Red China, and an embargo on travel to Cuba be lifted.

Several other recommendations were passed. Among them were declarations to encourage the peaceful use of outer space, strengthening of the United Nations and collection of birth control information for distribution to churches that request such information.

The delegates also asked that efforts to be made to include the Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths in the next world study conference, still unscheduled.

Hopkins At Conference On Courts

Pettis County was represented by William C. Hopkins, 1610 West 13th, at the Citizen's Conference on Missouri Courts at the Ramada Inn, Jefferson City, Wednesday through Friday.

Appointed by jurists throughout the state of Missouri, approximately 100 men and women through the state attended the three-day session. The group was invited to be a member of this conference which reviewed the current Missouri Court system. Clinics and general sessions were conducted by outstanding judges and lawyers throughout the country. Following the individual and group sessions Wednesday and Thursday, the laymen group met and outlined certain recommendations in connection with the court organization and administration; selection tenure of judges, retirement; discipline and removal of judges; and courts of limited and special jurisdiction as they related to the entire court system.

The conference was jointly sponsored by the Missouri Bar Association, the American Judicature Society, and the law schools at Missouri University, Washington University, St. Louis University, and the University of Missouri at Kansas City.

The Citizen's Conference on Missouri Courts will continue to function and work closely with the Missouri Bar Association and the American Judicature Society towards establishing procedures to legally improve the entire court system in the State of Missouri. Missouri has been known nationally as one of the more progressive states in periodically updating its courts.

New Method Increases Survival-

ATLANTIC CITY (AP)—Novel "second look" surgical operations for one of the worst forms of cancer are increasing survival rates moderately—and also are blazing trails for "better operations" of the future. The operations are undertaken in apparently healthy people.

This was reported to the American College of Surgeons today by Dr. Ward O. Griffen Jr. of the University of Kentucky.

He defined a "second look" operation thus:

It's a repeat operation planned virtually from the time certain patients are sewed up after undergoing an initial operation for often highly - elusive malignancies of the gastrointentinal tract—cancers of the colon, stomach, or rectum.

The latter are cancers which tend to spread insidiously, no matter how extensive the surgeon makes his original cutting.

The "second look" operations are planned for 4 to 9 months later for patients whose tissue removed by the initial surgery shows the cancer has a potential to spread via the lymphatic system.

The second - shot operations are based on these statistics:

If a patient has a cancer confined to the colon, his chance for five-year survival after initial operation—the usual critetia of "cure"—are about 75 per cent.

If the cancer spreads to the lymph system, chances of survival are reduced to 30 per cent. The percentage is lower for cancers of the stomach and rectum.

The novel thing about the "second look" operations, Griffen told the closing session of the surgeons' convention, is that they are undertaken at a time when the patient is showing no symptoms of cancer.

Warns Chinese Not To Be Misled By US Demonstrations

SEOUL (AP)—A leader of the Moral Re-Armament movement in the United States warned Communist China today not to be misled by the recent demonstrations of "a few insignificant pacifists who fail to understand freedom and the cost required to maintain it."

J. Blanton Belk, of Tucson, Ariz., told the group's world assembly, "The people of the United States want peace, but not at the price of freedom. They want patriotism, not pacifism, moral re-armament, not moral disarmament."

The assembly opened its four-day meeting Wednesday with about 1,500 delegates from 30 countries attending.

Tigers Take Third Spot In Conference

Homecoming Loss, 20-6

By D. Kelly Scruton

The Smith-Cotton Tigers had to settle for third place in the Central Missouri Conference due to their loss to the Columbia Kewpies, Friday night by a score of 20-6. The Kewpies, by virtue of the win, will hold the second place honors in the conference, as the Jefferson City Jays without dispute take the crown undefeated — in fact undefeated for 64 games in a row.

The Jays defeated Rolla on the Rolla gridiron by a score of 45 to 0.

The Tigers seemed to be unable to get going in their game with the Kewpies and were outgained in the opening quarter 82 yards to 21, as Columbia displayed their power. Coach Bob Roark's Kewpies took over on the kickoff on their own 33 yard line and ground out 66 yards and two feet to put the ball on the Tiger one-foot line. Craig Weaver had little difficulty in smashing into the line for the score and Dennis Stork booted the ball between the uprights for the point. The score came with five minutes and 37 seconds left in the quarter. It appeared as if the locals might settle down as they took the kickoff on their own nine yard line and Steve Long worked his way to his own 42 yard line. Unable to do more than eight yards Bill Herrick booted the ball to Robert Shamberger on his 15 and he got back to the 22. The Kewpies picked up six yards then drew 15 yards penalty, Shamberger tried again and got one, and then eight yards, the ball reaching the 25.

Craig Weaver punted to Steve Long on the 46 and as the quarter ended the Tigers had moved for a first down to the Kewpies 41 and were able to pick up five yards only to suffer a 15 yard penalty. Herrick punted to Shamberger on his own 11 who advanced to the 25, but two first downs bogged down on the Tiger 46 and Weaver punted. Long took the ball on his 11 yard line and was immediately stopped. After three tries Cusick and Wright picked up eight yards, and on the third down with Wright handling the ball he fumbled but recovered short of a first down. On the fumble Ronald Tegerdine picked up the ball and went for the goal line, but the officials ruled the ball dead. Herrick punted to John Onofrio on his 48 and he returned to the Tiger 27. Paul Simmons picked up a first down on 13 yards, picked up nine and on the next carry took the five yards with Tigers hanging all over him for the score. Stork had his kick blocked for the extra point and Columbia led Sedalia 13-0 at the halftime.

Smith-Cotton came back in the opening of the second half. They took the kickoff, as Jim Arnest received on his 19 yard line and returned to the 33 yard line. They picked up five first downs for 63 yards. It took four efforts to move from the four to the touchdown as Russ Cusick lost a yard, Don Wright picked up a yard, Steve Long picked up two yards then Muriel Robinson went crashing through the Kewpies for the tochdown. Herrick's try for the extra point was deflected and the ball went wide. The third quarter ended with Columbia still leading 13 to the Tigers 6.

Columbia, after the Tiger kickoff, was held, gaining only one yard with Shamberger picking up the yard. Columbia drew a 15 yard penalty; John Williams failed to gain and Craig Weaver lost eight trying to get away a pass. Weaver punted from his 18 yard line the ball going to Long on his 37 yard line and as he gained a yard, was hit hard and fumbled the ball with John Pipes recovering on the 38. They were on their 28 as the quarter ended.

Opening the fourth quarter it appeared as if the Kewpies were on their way to score moving down to their own five yard line. Simons picked up a yard, and on the next play the Kewpies drew a 15 yard penalty. Weaver made what appeared to be a touchdown pass to Onofrio, but it went incomplete. On the next play Onofrio took a pass good for 10 yards but short of a first down. The Tigers moved for nine yards and Herrick had to punt, it sailing down to the 50 yard line.

Four first downs were made by the Kewpies and the ball was on the one-yard line from where Weaver smashed into the center of the line for the score. This time Stork made the kick good and the score was boosted to 20 for the Kewpies.

The Tigers after the kickoff started from their 37, with one minute and 37 seconds left. Cusick's pass was incomplete and on the next play Columbia was penalized five yards. Cusick tried a screen pass and was driven back by the Kewpies and he got the ball away to Arnest and it was good for only 3 yards. Then the Tigers drew a 15 yard penalty. Cusick tried another pass and it went incomplete and on his next play he lost nine yards and Columbia took over on the Tiger 25. With 14 seconds to play Columbia drew a five yard penalty, and on the next play "squeezed in" Simmons picked up 10 yards and the game ended.

Paul Simmons proved a point in his condition as the 180-pound half back plowed his way through the game for 105 yards. Sedalia's ground gainer was Russ Cusick who collected 35 and also was charged with 10 yards lost. Columbia's quarterback Craig Weaver collected but 12 yards and lost 14.

Statistics of the game give the Kewpies 259 yards gained rushing to the Tigers 112; the Tigers lost only 10 yards rushing the Kewpies 12; the Tigers completed three of seven pass tries for 38 yards while the Kewpies 17 yards on two completions out of four tries; the Tigers kicked off twice for 104 yards and Columbia for 184 yards; the Tigers punted five times for 182 yards and the Kewpies three times for 109 yards; the Tigers returned four kicks for 58 yards and the Kewpies five for 76 yards; the Tigers drew 45 yards in penalties while the Kewpies were tagged for 85 yards. The Tigers made eight first downs and the Kewpies 17. Smith-Cotton fumbled once and Columbia recovered the ball and both teams recovered two of their own fumbles.

Sports Scraps

By D. KELLY SCRUTON

I DON'T GUESS a couple of people are going to like what I have to say this week about the Smith-Cotton Tigers, but I find there are many who saw Friday night's game who are in accord with my thinking. Actually I believe Coach Dick Rees and his staff feel about the same way.

The Tigers just had a mental block as a result of that trouncing handed them a week prior by the Jefferson City Jays and couldn't shake it off. I will say here and now the Tigers can play a far better brand of football than they exhibited in their game with Columbia. They went into the game with, what appeared when they came from the dressing room, determination.

Of course the Columbia Kewpies got the first break, won the toss and chose to receive. They went on a march from their own 33 yard line picking up six first downs to put the ball on the one foot line from which Craig Weaver, a sparkling quarterback, crashed through the line for the first score. In this drive the visitors displayed a powerful attack with Robert Shamberger, Paul Simmons and John Williams doing the driving.

Through the first quarter Columbia had complete control of the ball, giving it to the Tigers on their kickoff and forcing them to punt. In the final minutes of the quarter the Tigers took it over and held on for a first down, but relinquished it in the opening of the second period after three unsuccessful attempts to move. They got it back after they held Columbia on the Tiger 46, but were forced to punt when they were unable to move out from their 11 only to the 19. On Bill Herrick's punt to the Columbia 48, John Onofrio took it and returned to the Tiger 27. Simmons provided three plays on 13, 9 and 5 yards for the score.

Because of the low scoring of the Kewpies in the first half, many thought the Tigers might bounce back in the second half. They did on their first attack when they took over on their own 33 and marched to the four yard line. It took four plays to get the touchdown. After that the Tigers just seemed to get their spirits up and provided that expected refreshing attack they have displayed so well in previous games.

Because of the 20-7 score the Kewpies held to the Jays, it appeared they might feel they were the underdogs in this game. Actually the Tigers are far better than they showed against the Kewpies.

A Columbian remarked it was the second best game their team played this season, second only to the Jefferson City contest and they felt they might upset the Jays—but they didn't. After that game they had a fairly easy contest the following week and got the Tigers on the rebound from their tilt with the Jays.

I anticipate some mighty hard work for the rest of this week and season for the Tigers. Although they have lost two, they still can end up a fairly good saeson if they can conquer Higginsville next week, De La Salle the following week, to close out the season with a win over Springfield Parkview here, Nov. 12.

We still have faith in the team, because we know they can play a good brand of football—this they exhibited in their early games of the season against tough Mexico and Fulton.

—o—

DURING the game some more than 4,000 fans had their attention diverted from the game by an over anxious dog which kept running out on the gridiron. The game had to be stopped at one point to run the dog from the field.

It didn't bother the dog too much at the half time and he displayed his approval of the activities on the football field during the coronation ceremonies. He took part like the rest of those, wagging his tail in approval and roaming from here to there.

The dog also showed his like for the band, but we wonder if he liked or disliked the drums. Several times he went rushing up to the bass drum, then the snare drums wagging his tail in friendliness, but once he took a "nip" at one of the drums.

Anyway the dog enjoyed the evening to great lengths and to the delight of those who watched him from time to time.

—o—

IN an endeavor to get an idea on what to expect in regular club memberships at Elm Hills, local golfers who have been members can renew their memberships up to Nov. 1. After that no memberships will be renewed and those players will go on straight green fees next summer.

All charter members and those who held memberships in 1965 are eligble to renew. The plan also carries on for the family group.

Mr. and Mrs. Russ Ream who have operated Elm Hills for the past seven seasons are now preparing for their eighth season. In the last five years they have gradually been going from membership basis to strictly green fee basis.

Apparently the plan has been successful and making it possible for better golfing. The group plan which has been in effect is being discontinued but those who participated in this plan are eligible to remain as charter members.

The Reams indicated by their fall notice that sometime in the future they hope to gradually switch to grass greens instead of the present sand greens. The course when first opened back in the Thirties had grass greens, but lack of attention by the later operators let them get into such condition they had to be changed to sand.

Under the management of Mr. and Mrs. Ream, many local golfers have been given a chance to play at home and over the years many from surrounding communities have come to Sedalia to play.

Spiz Club Float Tops S-C Parade

By Vicki Ray

The Smith-Cotton Spiz Club's float entitled "Bury the Kewpies" won first prize in S-C's Homecoming parade Friday afternoon. Second and third places were taken by the Drama Club with a clever portrayal of "Rees' Meat Shop" and the Junior Class, whose float consisted of a large globe about to be destroyed by an A-bomb. Its caption was "Eve of Destruction."

In the Spiz float a Tiger dressed in mourning was skooted along the street by two Spiz members. It was followed by a huge colorful Kewpie doll on a white coffin which was carried by Spiz members. All Spiz members in the parade wore black mourning bands. Spiz Club is sponsored by Mrs. aGyle Cooper.

Five other floats were entered in the parade. On the Senior Class float two Tiger gridmen were stirring soup in a large steaming cauldron. It was entitled "We're Making Cream of Kewpie Soup." The Sophomore entry consisted of a giant Kewpie confronted with a pot of witches' brew.

The Freshmen Class plunged Tiger teamsters head-on into a giant pie where they enjoyed "Eating Kewpie Pie." Eighth graders were "Training for Victory" on their "Tiger Special '65." The train consisted of an engine and three cars, one of which was a "Kewpie cage."

The Future Homemakers Club "baked" a large pink cake which was placed on a miniature football field. Club members were "Slicing Their Way to Victory."

The parade was sponsored by the Senior High Student Council. Fred Strickert, senior, was parade chairman. Float judges were William O. Hiatt, Jr., Leon Hall and the Rev. George Sparling.

Band Salutes Graduates

Marty Phillips Is Crowned Homecoming Queen Friday

By Vicki Ray

Amidst a giant crown formed by Smith-Cotton's marching band Miss Marty Phillips was crowned Homecoming queen during half-time activities at Jennie Jaynes Stadium Friday night.

The band, under direction of Mrs. Geraldine Schrader, paid tribute to S-C alumni with its presentation of "Salute to Grads." Led by drum major Dwayne Steele, the band formed an apple, a tooth with cavity, a cash register, and a golden slipper. These formations depicted the various occupations which S-C graduates have pursued. The band played old favorites such as "Strike Up the Band", Here Comes A Sailor", "That's Where the Money Goes", and "Golden Slippers" Narration was by Bud Clark, S-C junior.

To the melody of "Pomp and Circumstance" Queen Marty and her attendants, Misses Sharon Waterfield and Stephanie Anderson were escorted across the gridiron. Miss Phillips, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Phillips, 904 Ruth Ann, was escorted by Larry Epperson, junior. Miss Waterfield's escort was Ray Murray, junior; Tom Munson, sophomore, escorted Miss Anderson. Each girl carried a bouquet of bronze chrysanthemums. Miss Janice Rundlett, Senior Student Council President, was accompanied on to the field by Mike McEver, senior.

As the royal court approached the front of the field the attendants, their escorts, and the Spiz Drill Team flanked the queen. Mike McEver crowned Miss Phillips.

The crowd then stood as the band played the school song, "Hail Alma Mater." Cheerleaders led the crowd in two cheers honoring Queen Marty and her attendants. They were seated in front of the stadium where they watched the remainder of the games.

"I consider it a great honor to represent our mighty Tiger team!" Miss Phillips said. She wore a simple sheath of white crepe accented by beadwork at the waist.

Miss Waterfield's dress was of white crepe with a black bodice and black lace at the bottom of the skirt. Miss Anderson chose a dress of antique white with an olive-green velvet bodice.

Mrs. Gayle Cooper, a member of the S-C faculty, was co-ordinator of halftime ceremonies.

To climax the Homecoming activities an informal dance was held in the school cafeteria, sponsored by the Student Council. A large crowd enjoyed dancing to music furnished by the "Notations."

Otterville Edges Nelson Eagles, 49-44

Otterville edged past Nelson's Eagles 49-44 in a non-conference basketball opener at Nelson Friday night, with Mike Bell connecting with two field goals and nine charity tosses to pave the way.

Otterville trailed by seven points in the opening quarter, and narrowed it down to five at the half, 28-25. Otterville's big break came in the third quarter when Nelson connected for only seven tallies to Otterville's 15. From then on, Otterville was generally in command.

Bell topped Otterville's scoring with 13 tallies, followed by Larry Diefendorf's 12. Tops for Nelson was Shannon, who dropped in five field goals and seven free throws to take scoring honors of the evening with 17 points.

Girls basketball action saw Otterville, paced by Burnett's 16 points, oust Nelson 26-23. Tops for Nelson was S. Jones with 15.

Ottervile enters the Jamestown Junior High and Girls Invitational Basketball Tournament this week. Next varsity action puts Otterville against Jamestown in a CCAA game Nov. 2.

Tigers Blank Indians In Loop Battle

The Versailles Tigers blanked the Osage Indians 13-6 in a Tri-County Conference football encounter at Versailles Friday night to set their league record at 3-2.

Osage drew first blood in the game in the first quarter when Strange galloped 30 yards for the first TD of the contest. The attempt for the point after failed.

Versailles, snagging a total of five passes out of the arms of would-be Osage receivers, connected for the first TD in the second quarter when Gary Wornell grabbed one of these passes and went 48 yards for the score. Versailles again scored in the fourth period when Ray Forrest plunged one yard through the line. Clinton Anderson ran the point after.

The Tigers, owning a 3-4 mark for the season, will go against Kemper Military next Friday at Versailles in a non-conference battle.

At Least Two Tournaments

Basketball Season Slated To Get Started This Week

By Pete Daniels

This week marks the opening of the 1965-66 basketball season in mid-Missouri, with at least two tournaments starting this Monday and regular season action getting underway Friday for some schools.

In the Pettis - Benton County Activities Association league, a top battle for conference honors looms in the offing for local fans. Coaches, in pre - season speculation, have picked the Northwest Mustangs, who also played in another conference last year, as the favorite in PBCAA action this season.

Northwest has eight lettermen returning this season. Though his optimism is tempered by restraint, Coach Bob Arnold feels ". . . we could be tough since we didn't lose too many by graduation" in 1964. Northwest finished with a 5-2 mark in PBCAA play last season and had an 8-2 record in non-league play.

Arnold owns an impressive 106-63 career won-loss record and holds 24 wins and only eight losses at Northwest since the school was reorganized. Lettermen returning this year are: Paul Coffelt, who had a nine points per game average last season; Jim Kessler, '12; Gary Brownfield, 20; Jerry Vardeman, 8; Freddie Kraft, 7; Robert Wiley, 6; Alan McCurdy, 5; and Ray Arnett, 3.

"This is the second year for the boys playing together. They have their patterns (and) they have a winning attitude," Arnold said. That combination is what threatens Warsaw, last year's champions.

Sacred Heart's Gremlins, cellar-dwellers last season, can expect to make a stronger run for the title this season, even-though Coach Jim Gladbach sees Northwest as the potential champion.

Warsaw may run a close second, Gladbach said, but can expect plenty of competition from Smithton and Sedalia. Smithton Coach Rodney Meyer frankly picks Warsaw to repeat last year's performance. Warsaw Coach Bill Akers, however, feels injuries could hurt the team. "We should have a little better than average team. We play a real tough schedule. If we can keep from having injuries we can play at least .500 basketball."

Warsaw has five lettermen back this year in Tom Shepardson, who had 12 points per game last season; Bob Barnes, with 16; Robert Barb, 4; Jerry Day, 8; and James Miller, 4.

Sacred Heart also has five men back. They are Bob Scherer, 12.4 points a game last season; Ron Kruse, with 12.8; Mike Maple, 10.1; Ward Kniest, 4.8; and Tony Brown, 3.3.

Kruse, a senior this year, stands 6-4 and is the tallest man on the Gremlin roster. His rebound average last year was tops on the team, 17.0. Scherer, next man "down" in the height department, is 6-2½. He averaged 10.4 rebounds last season.

Playing in Class "S" this year, the Gremlins' schedule is not as rough as it was in 1964-65. Gladbach, eyeing the season ahead, said, "We have three well experienced ball players back who will be able to carry the load. We should win more than half of our games providing the boys work up to their capacity." Last year, Sacred Heart finished with a 7-20 record in non-conference play.

Meyer, piloting Smithton's much stronger team, can count on some added experience this year. "We have most of our players back from last season," he said, and added, "Our weakness is a lack of height."

That touch of experience, and the willingness and ability to hustle, Meyers feels, will make up for the height factor. Smithton finished 5-14 last year. Returning lettermen and their average points per game last season are: Mike Turner, 9.5; Rodney Thomas, 7; David Grupe, 5; Allen Zimmerschied, 5.5; Don Payne, 2.5; and Mickey Selken, 2.9.

Jim Edmundson, head coach at Green Ridge, has four lettermen returning for the 1965 campaign. Steve Ray tops the list with a 12 points per game average last year. Then comes George Reed, 10; Jim Dove, 5; and Kenneth Ollison, 3.

Says Coach Edmundson: "This year's team is more of a hustling team. I believe that the mental attitude is much better. Our record may not be a great deal, but things look brighter." For Edmundson, in his second year at Green Ridge, this season is one on which the team's future may be built. Last year, Green Ridge finished 5-10 in non-league play.

Lincoln's Cardinals have a new coach this season in Ken Willingham, a recent graduate of Kirksville State. With only two lettermen back from last year, Willingham said, "We have back our 6-6 forward (D. Brandsgaard) and have improved our defense considerably. We should have good board control and above-average shooting." Willingham also sees Northwest as the top team in the league.

His other returning letterman is B. Farris. Brandsgaard had a 15 points per game average last season and Farris four.

Only two other schools in the PBCAA did not return a questionnaire mailed out earlier by The Democrat-Capital.

In Wrestling Action

Henning Will Get Double Shot At Viking Tuesday

The way Lee Henning has it figured, the Viking will have something to learn in Convention Hall Tuesday night (Oct. 26).

Henning will have a double shot at the bushy-faced Norwegian when he first wrestles the Viking in an individual pairing, then sides with youthful Bobby Shane to oppose the blond belter and his partner, Jack Vanski, in team action in the main event.

Henning has told Matchmaker Gust Karras that he has long been tired of people talking about him being too old to wrestle. "I think I've proved myself every time I've been in the ring," commented the 51-year-old warrior.

"The Viking is a 'thumb' man. Well, I'll show him two thumbs and some other tricks that I doubht he knows anything about," the veteran added.

The alliance of Henning and Shane is one of youth and age. Shane is only 19 years old and is in his second year as a professional. Henning, at 51, has been at the craft well over 30 years and is generally regarded as the oldest wrestler active in the nation today. Despite his advanced years, he remains in peak physical condition and appears to have speed enough to match all opponents.

Tuesday's program will also mark an appearance here by the towering Ox, a massive 320-pounder, who'll be engaged in action by burly Corsica Joe. The Ox currently is undefeated. He'll also serve as a second referee behind Dick Moody for the team feature.

Besides the Henning - Viking single clash, Shane will get a solid test from Vanski in other individual action.

Three Football Teams To Fight For Victories

Three Smith-Cotton football teams will be fighting for victories next week.

S-C's Junior Varsity, under the direction of Coach Wes Sanders, will tangle with Slater for the second time Monday night at 7 p. m. at Jennie Jaynes Stadium. The Tigers defeated Slater earlier this year, 31-12, but since then S-C has been somewhat hampered by injuries, Sanders indicated. The Junior Varsity hopes to improve its 3-2 record.

Tuesday night, the freshman team will travel to Jefferson City with the hope of evening their 2-3 record. Coach Earl Finley stated that he looks for a sharp contest with the Jays.

The eighth grade "B" team, under coaches Foster McGuire and Paul Schwartz, will make a trip to Clinton Thursday at 5 p. m. Prior to their defeat by Windsor last Wednesday 8-0, the eighth grade team held a perfect record of all wins and no losses.

$13,000 Has Been Raised By 2 Papers

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — More than $13,000 has been raised by Knoxville's two daily newspapers for a scholarship fund for the seven young children of three Tennesse coaching assistants killed in a car-train accident last week. The money was raised by the Knoxville News-Sentinel and Knoxville Journal.

Spectators at the Houston-Tennessee football game Saturday were given an opportunity to donate to the fund before, during and after the contest—and the total won't be known until probably sometime Monday.

The fund was one of at least four such funds started throughout the country in memory of the coaches — Bill Majors, Bob Jones and Charles Rash. They were injured fatally Monday when a train struck their car at a grade crossing west of here.

Another such fund, for the families of the coaches, has been started in Memphis.

At Columbia, Mo., the Missouri Alumni Association started a fund in memory of Rash, a former Missouri football star. And a Bobby Jones memorial scholarship fund has been started at Baylor University, where Jones was a football star.

There was no announcement of contributions to the other funds.

And at Shelbina, Mo., where Rash grew up and starred in high school football, the Board of Education established a Charlie Rash Memorial Fund for construction of a new high school athletic field to be named inh is honor.

Tigers Overpower Iowa State For Win

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Missouri overpowered Iowa State 23-7 Saturday on the running of Charlie Brown, Carl Reese and John Roland for its third Big Eight Conference victory.

The Tigers, tied with Nebraska for the conference lead and setting the stage for their meeting at Columbia, Mo., next Saturday, scored three of the first four times they got the football.

Roland started the Tigers goalward twice with punt returns of 16 and 23 yards, and scored the third touchdown on a four-yard run to climax a 60-yard march in the second period.

A four play, 37-yard drive put Missouri in front 7-0 with the game less than four minutes old. Gary Lane passed 20 yards to Earl Denny for the touchdown.

Gary King's fumble of Ray West's punt and Ray Thorpe's recovery put the Tigers only 10 yards away from their second touchdown. Brown went into the end zone from one yard out on fourth down.

The Cyclones had two scoring opportunities in the third quarter before finally getting a touchdown and becoming the first team to score on the ground against Missouri's strong line this season.

West's punt into a gusty northwest wind traveled only 18 yards to the Missouri 29. A 19-yard Tim Val Galder to Eppie Barney pass put the Cyclones on the three-yard line, and two plays later Leslie Webster plunged in from the two.

Iowa State had the ball for all except eight plays in the third period, But it was stopped two yards away from a touchdown after driving 38 yards. Roland's fumble of the second half kickoff on the Mizzou 40 presented the Cyclones with this unsuccessful scoring chance.

Missouri's Bill Bates, a Storm Lake, Iowa, youth, added a 27-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

Iowa State, losing its second conference game, reached the Missouri 38 after a 42-yard march in the first quarter but did not get beyond midfield after that in the first half.

Brown, the nation's seventh leading ground gainer this week, rushed for 95 yards on 22 carries. Reese added 55 yards. Roland, who also intercepted a Van Galder pass, returned three punts a total of 77 yards.

Webster, a sophomore from Omaha, was Iowa State's leading ball carrier with 71 71 yards on 18 carries. Willie Robinson, who was injured in the third quarter, contributed 30 yards to Iowa State's meager rushing yardage.

Van Galder, in trying to pass, was thrown for a total of 41 yards in rushing losses and the Cyclones wound up with only 85 yards on the ground.

Way Back When...

By Pete Daniels

THE WORLD SERIES had run its course, full attention was being focused on football and several Sedalians were beginning to eye pheasants to replace chickens — which cost too much. The year was 1946.

With the series safely tucked away, Sedalia was getting ready to bring two college teams here for local fans to watch. The University of Missouri "B" team was set to go against Kansas State's "B" squad and three local youngsters were in MU's lineup.

Two came from the same family. They were Jack and Danny Van Dyne. The third was Fred Hulse. All three had turned in outstanding performances for Smith-Cotton. Top brass from the University's coaching staff planned to be on hand to watch the "youngsters" at work. Top notch players, then as now, became material for the varsity. Sedalians had their hopes high for local boys.

A LARGE GROUP of Sedalians planned a trip to South Dakota, it was announced on Oct. 13 that year, to hunt pheasants. One of them, William Burton, was a Democrat-Capital employee.

According to the story, Burton said the price of chickens was nearing a prohibitive stage and he felt, eventhough the long trip would be expensive, he could come out at least even provided he got his limit of birds.

Some others from Sedalia must have had the same opinion because Burton wasn't making the trip alone. Others planning to go were Bob Fenwick, of Marshall, and Sedalians Bill Lush, Ray Robbins, W. G. Whitaker, B. A. "Bunny" Fischer, Dr. F. I. Lawrence, Lawrence Twenter, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brosch, Roy Burkholder, Cal Rodgers, Sr., and Gordon Potter. They planned to be gone a week or ten days.

CONCERNING THE 1946 baseball season, local fans might remember some of these facts:

The St. Louis Cardinals, of course won that year despite the fact that everybody except Cardinal fans were looking at Boston as the champion. Murry Dickson, with a 15-6 won-loss record and a .714 average, was the championship pitcher in the National League. In the American, it was Boo Ferris, holding a 25-6 mark and a .806 average.

Ralph Kinner, in the NL, led the circuit with home runs, collecting 23, while Hank Greenberg had 44 in the American. Kiner played for Pittsburgh and Greenberg for Detroit.

Stan Musial, as expected, took the most valuable player award for the Cardinals in 1946, while Ted Williams got the same title in the AL. Both would later be listed among the baseball greats of all time.

Musial also was declared champion batter in 1946 with a .365 average, while M. Vernon took it in the American with a .353 mark. Great year for baseball!

from ages 18 and over. Prepare now for U.S. Civil Service job openings during the next 12 months.
Government positions pay high starting salaries. They provide much greater security than private employment and excellent opportunity for advancement. Many positions require little or no specialized education or experience.
But to get one of these jobs, you must pass a test. The competition is keen and in some cases only one out of five pass.
Lincoln Service has helped thousands prepare for these tests every year since 1948. It is one of the largest and oldest privately owned schools of its kind and is not connected with the Government.
For FREE booklet on Government jobs, including list of positions and salaries, fill out coupon and mail at once—TODAY.
You will also get full details on how you can prepare yourself for these tests.

BOB HOPE'S 50th FILM is "I'll Take Sweden," opening today at the Fox Theatre, through United Artists release. Co-starred with the veteran comedian is Tuesday Weld, Frankie Avalon, Dina Merrill and Jeremy Slate. For the Technicolor comedy with music Hope journeys to the land of blondes, bathhouses and bikinis.

Two bikini-clad beauties and Elvis in the middle! That's the happy situation of Presley's new song, dance and girl-filled Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy, "Kissin' Cousins." Yvonne Craig (left) and Pam Austin are two of the lovelies in this rootin'-tootin' entertainment in which Presley plays a dual role as a hillbilly mountain man and an Air Force officer. Co-starred are Arthur O'Connell, Glenda Farrell, Jack Albertson and Cynthia Pepper, and it's in Panavision and Metrocolor. Now showing at the 50-Drive-In.

Well, Dear Friends, winter is upon us, and it has been a long, busy summer, so we are going to CLOSE MONDAYS until the first of April. We're also going to shut it down at ten o'clock each nite except Friday and Saturday, when we will be open 'til our usual midnite. These new winter hours will give us more time with Kimber and Traci, and Ma and me can even watch the late show on TV.

If you haven't been out for dinner for a while, come on out and enjoy a delicious Barbecue Beef, Pork, Ham, Rib or Chicken Dinner, served with soup, salad, baked beans, hot bread and chips. It's a real treat for the entire family, and our popular Italian spaghetti and meatballs is back on the menu for the winter months.

We'll be expecting you to dinner by the fireplace, so c'mon!

Former College President Ready To Leave Town

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP)—"I'm afraid my work here is finished," a former college president said as he and his wife prepared to leave town because of harassment and threatening telephone calls.

Dr. Lloyd A. Moll, 63, said Friday the final straw was the request to resign as teacher of a Sunday School class at the First Methodist Church—a class named for him when he started teaching it 15 years ago.

Moll and attorney Warren Fortson were among a group of whites who urged appointment of a biracial committee during civil rights demonstrations this past summer.

The Fortsons moved to Atlanta about six weeks ago, after also receiving threatening phone calls. Fortson is a brother of Georgia's secretary of state, Ben W. Fortson Jr.

Moll was president of Georgia Southwestern College for 13 years. At present he is chairman of the Sumter County Economic Opportunity Authority, a post he plans to resign.

He said he will move somewhere outside Georgia and hopes to decide when and where in about a week.

Shortchange Workers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Employers shortchanged 406,333 workers $74.45 million in wages in fiscal 1965 by violating federal pay standards, the Labor Department has found.

Employers have agreed to make good on $24 million in back wages and overtime, but the remaining $50 million or so is still tied up in negotiation and litigation, a department spokesman said Friday.

Nomination Dies In Congress

LBJ Has No Plans To Take Back Morrissey Job Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Francis X. Morrissey's nomination to be a federal judge is dead for this session of Congress, but the White House says President Johnson has no plan to withdraw it.

Still, after Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., electrified the Senate Thursday by moving to send the nomination back to the Judiciary Committee, some senators said they would be surprised if Johnson resubmits it next year. Kennedy is chief sponsor of the Morrissey nomination.

After Congress quits for this year, the President can give Morrissey a recess appointment. The Senate would have to pass on the nomination next year, though, and Morrissey would have to resign his $20,000-a-year post as a Boston Municipal Court judge with no certainty he would be approved.

In an emotional speech asking that the nomination be returned to committee, Kennedy said its compilation of "a full and complete record" on Morrissey will result in his confirmation.

And, Kennedy said of the old friend of the Kennedy family, "He will be a credit to the federal judiciary."

But, there was widespread feeling backstage at the Senate that Morrissey's nomination for the U.S. District Court in Massachusetts may be dead forever.

Johnson nominated Morrissey largely on Kennedy's strong recommendation.

White House press secretary Bill D. Moyers told newsmen Kennedy had informed the President Wednesday night it seemed best to have the nomination returned to committee.

"The President told him," Moyers said, "he himself was very much behind Morrissey's nomination or he wouldn't have submitted it, but it was a Senate matter and he would abide by the senator's judgment."

At another meeting with newsmen later, Moyers was asked if Johnson plans to withdraw the nomination. "No," Moyers replied.

In his speech, watched from the gallery by several members of the Kennedy family, Kennedy defended Morrissey but said, "I would wish any man placed on the court on my recommendation to be able to take his seat free of unresolved controversy"

If a vote were taken Thursday, Kennedy said, Morrissey would have been confirmed.

Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, of Montana, agreed, saying "The votes were here."

However, not having to vote was a relief for some Democratic senators. The Republicans, seemed solidly lined up behind their leader, Sen. Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, in opposing Morrissey.

Dirksen had challenged Morrissey's qualifications, as had the America Bar Association and the Boston Bar Association. The Massachusetts Bar Association and some other bar groups had endorsed him for the $30,000-a-year judgeship.

A sidelight on the nomination developed later in the day as reports circulated on Capitol Hill that Italian newspapers reported on the chance encounter between deported Mafia gangster Michael Spinella and Judge Morrissey and Edward Kennedy on the Italian island of Capri in 1961.

A spokesman for Kennedy, said neither Kennedy nor Morrissey had ever seen Spinella before or knew who he was until Spinella approached them at an outdoor table at a Capri hotel.

The spokesman added:

"Spinella, of course, knew who Kennedy was. He told Kennedy he had a son in the Marines Corps who had a problem he wanted Kennedy to look into. Kennedy told Spinella to write him a letter.

". . .Kennedy was just being civil to someone who had come up to him and told of needing help for a son in the Marine Corps. . . Kennedy never got a letter from Spinella about his son or heard from him otherwise and has never seen him again."

Kennedy, not then a U.S. senator, was heading a delegation of Bostonians on a goodwill mission. Morrissey was a member of the delegation.

The spokesman said it was a case of Spinella, a deported American gangster, latching onto a public figure. He said Spinella was the source of the stories which first appeared in the Italian papers in 1961.

The spokesman said that to counter any possible Republican use of the Italian articles, Sen. Kennedy's office had gotten from Morrissey last Sunday an affidavit stating that he had not known Spinella before the chance meeting in Capri and that he had never acted as attorney for him and never had any contact with Spinella afterward.

At the Justice Department, a spokesman said the FBI was aware of the meeting but had concluded it had no significance.

Spinella, once linked by American police with the notorious Detroit "Purple Gang," was deported to Italy in 1953 on a charge that he had entered the United States illegally.

He had lived in Paterson, N.J., at one time and maintained a luxurious home in Miami Beach, Fla., before his deportation.

Struggle to Keep Music Press Running

HERE FOR 96 YEARS — This old building on South Kentucky, a few yards north of Broadway, has been home for the Perry Music Co. for 96 years. Founded in 1856 in St. Joseph, the firm has been continually engaged in music publishing longer than any other company in the United States. Printing plate files reveal that as many as 400 different songs have been published by Perrys. A musical magazine with circulation of about 1,000 is published here monthly.

Unequalled Record In Publishing

Perry Music Co. In Same Location Here Since 1870

By W. D. HILL

FOR 96 years the Austin W. Perry Music Publishing house has stood in the same location. The frame structure is incongruous with the architecture of surrounding buildings. To the casual passer-by, it might appear as "another eye-sore" that progress ought to remove.

Inside, there's antiquated printing equipment and a genuine general store atmosphere which movie producers strive so diligently to re-create.

The firm lays an undisputed claim on being the oldest in the United States continually engaged in music publishing.

In the front sales room stands a large concert piano three times the size of the standard instrument. Its top is an unorganized clutter of music, some dating back 50 years. This was where Scott Joplin, the father of ragtime music and all the syncopated sounds that were to follow, sat to play for Austin Perry.

That was in 1895. But Perry wasn't buying any of the melodies, including "Maple Leaf Rag" which carried Joplin to fame and fortune a few years later.

Perry did purchase one of Joplin's tunes, "The Favorite" rag in 1900, but did not publish it until 1904 after Joplin's rise to world fame.

But from the century-old dust-covered press in the distant backroom, that today still prints a monthly musical magazine, came several pieces of original sheet music that have helped account for the firm's longevity. Among these were such familiar favorites as "School Days," and "Moonlight and Roses." There were many others.

No one is certain just how many there are but the firm's file of copper and zinc printing plates, a method uncommon in later days, is estimated to total more than 400. So self-sufficient is this file, that the firm has published its monthly musical magazine continually without adding an original piece of music since 1927, a span of 38 years.

The absence of records stirs an air of mystery about the Perry Publishing Co. Its sole operator, Mrs. Viola Eckles, says there is no longer any major concern for the company's copyrighted materials. "Most of the copyrights have expired and those that haven't will in the next few years."

A publisher can copyright music for 28 years and then has the option to renew for an additional 28 years at which time the music enters the category of public domain.

Throughout the building are numerous dust-laden filing bins undoubtedly holding many items of historical interest which Mrs. Eckles has exercised extreme care not to disturb. Somewhere in these bins may lie pertinent information for historians, particularly important at a time when Sedalia is seeking national landmark designation from the Department of the Interior for the city's contributions to American music.

Some of these records may date back nearly 110 years to 1856 when Austin W. Perry formed his publishing company, which had its beginning in the young river town of St. Joseph, Mo. Here was a wild and raucous frontier settlement, although among the residents were people of culture who appreciated the finer things of life such as music.

Awareness of this audience may well have inspired Austin W. Perry to organize the firm that came to Sedalia in 1870 and still is doing business from its original location.

Inside this old structure, which has had little care in recent years, musical dreams came true for Austin Perry. In later years two sons, Philip and Andrew, joined the firm and spent their lifetimes laboring over musical scores in the two-story frame building just a half block off Broadway, Sedalia's principal residential thoroughfare.

Perry was described as a man of unlimited energy. When he first came here he started his business by selling pianos door to door from a wagon. He was a talented musician who had studied in Germany and Austria under Kullak Klindworth Reif. For his first published magazine, Perry set the type himself, arranged and printed the intricate musical movements on a small press in the back room of his shop.

Most of the machinery used by Austin Perry can still be seen in the shop.

With the growing demand for sheet music, Perry began publishing his monthly musical magazine a few years after settling here. It originally contained about 10 selections for the piano and organ, plus songs with words and music supplemented by a story about an artist and his works.

Today the publication is still distributed to all 50 states and several foreign countries but its number of selections has decreased to four and no longer contains any editorial material.

Sales total about 1,000 copies and despite the decrease in number of pages, subscription price of the paper has resulted in an increase from the original $1.50 per copy to $2. A part-time printer runs the press for Mrs. Eckles whenever the mail date rolls around. Mrs. Eckles spends a full week preparing the publication for mailing.

To some extent the original cover format is still followed month after month but usually with a seasonal theme.

Sales today are a far cry from the cardboard records dangling from a twine on the wall of the pressroom that date back to 1942 when 2,500 copies were being published. But business was considerably better after the war years and the record shows peak production of 3,600 copies in November, 1946. There are no records before 1942, to Mrs. Eckles' knowledge.

The last record posted was in 1955 when production of 1,500 copies reflected the major decline in business. This was about the time manager H. A. Bundy died. Bundy took over management in 1945, following the death of Andrew Perry — the last Perry to head the firm. Mrs. Eckles has been with the operation for about 13 years.

"When something breaks down, that's just the end of that phase of our operation," Mrs. Eckles says. "I just keep shop from day-to-day and whatever we can do, we do. You can see there are no repairs being made

RELIC PIANO — This huge piano came to Sedalia by covered wagon nearly a century ago and is situated in the main sales room of the A. W. Perry Music Co. on South Kentucky avenue. Mrs. Viola Eckles (seated at far end of piano) says a recent check of the serial number dates the instrument as being manufactured during the Civil War period. Scott Joplin father of ragtime music, played for Perry his famous rags on this instrument right where it now stands. Mrs. Eckles says the piano has been appraised at a value of $5,000.

DUST-LADEN TYPE — A thick layer of dust covers type cases in the Perry printing room. Some of this type has not been used for decades and many of the faces are now extinct. Some stories about great artists are still "standing" in type, locked in chasses. Mrs. Eckles, for benefit of the camera, blows away some of the dust cover.

ATMOSPHERE OF AN ERA PASSED — The huge pot-bellied stove (right), the coal bucket and a stoking shovel, thoroughly date the scene in the Perry press room. The century old press in background was modified years ago when electric motors became available to power the heavy equipment once operated by hand. The press produces Perry's monthly musical magazine which is distributed to all 50 states and some foreign countries. (Democrat-Capital photos)

Mrs. Leroy Paul Chmelir

Miss Mary Ann Schader Marries Mr. Leroy Paul Chmelir Oct. 9

At half past nine o'clock Saturday morning, Oct. 9, Miss Mary Ann Schader became the bride of Mr. Leroy Paul Chmelir in a double ring ceremony read by the Rev. Gottlieb Steinwach, at St. John's Catholic Church, Bahner. Father Steinwach was celebrant for nuptial high mass.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Schader, Mora, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Paul Chmelir, Route 1.

Baskets of chrysanthemums and greenery were placed at the sides of the altar.

Mrs. John Seifner, Jr., played organ selections and accompanied Mr. Al Domingue, who sang, "On This Day, Oh Beautiful Mother," "Ave Maria," the English Mass and "Mother, At Your Feet Is Kneeling."

Mass servers were Mr. Fred Schader and Mr. Edward Schader, twin brothers of the bride.

Escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of silk faced peau. The molded bodice was styled with a scoop neckline and long tapering sleeves which came to points over the hands. Appliques of re-embroidered Alencon lace trimmed the yoke and the slim sheath skirt front. Pleated fullness at the sides and back, finished with a butterfly bow, curved and lengthened to a court train. A forward petal plateau of lace and pearls held her French pouf veil of silk illusion. The bridal bouquet was of white Stephanotis and greenery. Her only jewelry was a single strand of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom.

Mrs. Joseph Chmelir, Sedalia, cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a gold brocade gown featuring a V-scalloped neckline, short set-in sleeves and lowered front waistline, pointed at the center, and a full softly pleated skirt.

Mrs. John Smasal, Sedalia, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Frank Weller, Versailles, friend of the bride, were bridesmaids. They wore gowns of yellow brocade styled like that of the maid of honor.

Ushers were Mr. Charles Schader, Smithton, and Mrs. Larry Koechner, Tipton.

Miss Mildred Twenter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Twenter, Stover, was flower girl. Her dress of white brocade was styled like that of the other attendants. She carried a basket of yellow rose petals.

Master Hugo Twenter, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Twenter, Stover, carried rings to the altar on a white satin pillow.

After the wedding, dinner was served to the bridal party and immediate families at Flat Creek Inn.

The mother of the bride chose for her daughter's wedding, a jacket dress of pale blue brocade with black accessories. The mother of the bridegroom selected a midnight blue knit dress with black accessories. Both wore yellow chrysanthemum corsages.

A reception for approximately 100 guests was held at Holiday Inn. The bride's table was centered with a three - tiered wedding cake highlighted with a miniature bride and bridegroom. Yellow and white chrysanthemums and greenery encircled the cake. Servers were Mrs. Edward Weller, Jr., Sedalia, Miss Joyce Weller, Mora, and Miss Shirley Chmelir, Ionia.

Attending the gift table were Mrs. Charles Schader, Miss Lucy Chmelir, Ionia, and Miss Ruth Koechner, Tipton. Miss Judy Whitlow, Kansas City, presided at the guest book.

For a wedding trip to the south and mid-central states, the bride wore an aqua blue crepe dress with black accessories.

Same Grim, Drab Picture Is Painted By Refugees

EDITOR'S NOTE — Once again the refugees are streaming out of Cuba, this time the aged, the infirm, the young. And it's a dismal picture they draw of life in Castro-land. Here's their poignant story of life under communism — Cuban style.

By SAUL PETT
AP Special Correspondent

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — "Muy Mal," said the thin old Cuban refugee, fingering his American papers with the care he gives his rosary.

"Muy mal," said the school girl and the housewife and the baker and the cab driver and the retired old sea captain and the mechanic and the truck driver and the cousin of the president of Cuba, all of them speaking of life today in the sixth year of Fidel Castro's revolution.

"Very bad" is the way they invariably begin, these newest Cuban refugees who left their island with Castro's permission. And consistently they paint the same picture of a grim drab life under a state that rules by terror and neighborhood spies, where children are encouraged to inform on their parents and people speak little and cautiously in public.

They talk of a land where government men periodically show up in the classrooms and run the children through their Communist catechisms and inspect their notebooks to make certain they are being properly indoctrinated; where the economy is wrecked, the services disorganized and old cars roll off the road and die for lack of parts.

They speak of a land where virtually all food is rationed and the average Cuban seldom gets the half-pound of meat a week he has been promised; where the streets are deserted and many houses need paint and the television is dreary with heavy-handed propaganda; where half the churches are closed and more than half the stores are shut down for lack of goods and the night clubs and the big hotels are virtually empty except for Russian technicians and other Marxist visitors living on the government arm.

This is the picture the refugees paint of life in Cuba. How many brushstrokes are colored by personal prejudices, how many glimpses are seen through a mirror distorted by personal tragedy are matters of conjecture.

The refugees emerging now from Cuba most frequently are old pensioners or children or sick people. Very few in the 15-to-27 age group, the primary military age, are being released. Vocationally, the new exiles include no doctors, very few engineers or other technically trained people.

"In other words," said a U.S. State Department official, "Castro so far seems to be letting out the people he doesn't need — the elderly, the unskilled, the dissidents, the ill, the people he no longer has to provide with scarce housing, food, medical supplies or pensions."

The refugees are allowed to take with them only two changes of clothes, very little money and nothing else. They say that before they leave Cuba, they must make an inventory of everything in their homes, which is checked by a government agent and then they go, leaving behind their houses or apartments, all their furniture, appliances, cars and bank accounts. There are no receipts.

In describing life in Cuba, the heavy majority of the refugees asked that their names not be used for fear of reprisals against relatives still on the island. One exception was Nicolas Torrado Hidalgo, a gray-faced taut man of 60, whose first cousin is the mother of the president of Cuba, Oswald Dorticos Torrado. The relationship did Nicolas Torrado no good.

He said that his son, Roberto, who had fought originally with Castro, joined an anti-Castro underground in 1962. Roberto was wounded and taken prisoner while fighting in the Santa Clara mountains. Nicolas went to the mother of the president to plead for his son's life. She assured him the boy would live.

"But I learned later," said the father, "that Roberto was taken to a hospital, treated for his wound and that night was taken out and shot by a firing squad."

Many of the refugees reported that when Castro announced all those who wanted to could go to the United States there was, for once, relatively free and happy conversation in the streets.

Cubans, by the thousands, were lining up before government offices seeking passports and exit permits, said the refugees.

Most refugees say that Castro still has about 20 to 30 per cent of Cubans with him. As for the unfamiliar cheers and applause in the streets for departing Cubans, they point out that Castro can stop that any time he chooses. His critics in Cuba have few weapons and little organized strength.

The underground now, say the refugees, appears to be limited to attempts to slow down work in the factories and other mild forms of passive resistance. But Castro, they say, still has the military power, the Communist organizations, the secret police and the committee for the Defense of the Revolution — CDR.

The CDR claims a membership of two million, who, the government publicly announced, were supposed to inform on all "counterrevolutionary" activities among their fellow Cubans.

The CDR appears ubiquitous. They watch and make notes on visitors to a given home, time of arrival, how many came, in what kind of car, time of departure. The production chief of a fertilizing plant in Matanzas said CDR agents were watching his men all the time for inefficiency or sabotage.

"The CDR even smells what you're cooking," said a housewife, "to make sure you haven't bought anything in the black market."

The refugees reported that one sees more Russians in Cuba these days than Chinese, that the Russians live in the best hotels, eat and drink grandly and have whole beaches reserved for their private use.

The cab driver said that at one time the 38-story Havana Hilton, since renamed the Havana Libre, had only 20 rooms occupied, all by Russians, it being Libre only for the men from Moscow.

The New Medicis

Businessman Most Active Art Supporter of Today

By SALLY RYAN
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The modern Medicis of the art world are the princes of commerce and finance and industry who spend fortunes collecting masterpieces and supporting unknown or unrecognized artists.

Their collections are to be seen not in the public museums but upon the walls of reception rooms and offices, on the facades and the plazas and entryways of buildings.

The day of the enormously wealthy, somewhat eccentric, usually highly individualist collector has vanished for the most part.

Now the white collar executive is the world's biggest and most active art patron. He amasses the work of Picasso, Matisse or Rodin; is willing to play safe with the accepted masters and gamble with the moderns and innovationists.

He does it for a variety of reasons: to bolster his image, sell more products, polish up stockholders, impress customers and the community — and because art is important personally.

Johnson's Wax paid $750,000 for 102 paintings by contemporary American artists, and then thousands more to send them on tour to 14 foreign countries and 22 American cities.

"Since art, by its nature, needs some form of subsidy, and since the days of the Medicis are gone, the public must look to government or industry," says Arthur L. Harris, 55, president of Mead Packaging of Atlanta, Ga.

For Harris, the patron to help struggling artists is industry.

A trustee of the Atlanta Art Association, he started out looking for something besides the usual pecans for Mead's corporate Christmas gifts.

He commissioned a Georgia artist to do a painting and then sent out 6,000 reproductions. Letters poured in, seeking more prints.

Now the parent Mead Corp. in Dayton, Ohio, is sponsoring an exhibition of 50 paintings by contemporary American artists which will tour the nation for two years.

"It helps us recruit executive talent by becoming better known and more highly regarded. Our program helps support our stockholder relations and community relations activities, too.

"More importantly, it helps us sell our products."

Harris is typical of the new breed of executive — a graduate of Yale (1931) and Harvard Law School (1934), who collects first editions and Napoleonia.

Then there is Georges Kaplan, Fifth Avenue furrier. A friend gave him a painting 10 years ago.

"It was like eating peanuts," Kaplan said.

"I started trading fur coats for paintings, and now I have one of the largest Larry Rivers collection. Our whole showroom is covered with art, from junk and abstract to op.

"It gives a whole different atmosphere to the firm and relieves the heaviness of fashion."

One noted collection is that of Chase Manhattan Bank in New York. The bank refers to it not as a collection but "a means of completing a modern building," and employs three persons full time to handle it.

Eventually, some of the works may be donated to museums.

At Chase, a new officer is interviewed to see what his interests and hobbies are, and then his office is tailored to fit.

The art works are carried on the books as decorations and furnishings, and thus a depreciable asset: a major tax advantage.

A fjord is a long narrow arm of the sea extending inland, resulting from the inundation by the sea of a severely glaciated valley. Many fjords are astonishingly deep. Sogne Fjord in Norway is 4,078 feet deep. Messier Channel in Chile is 4,167 feet deep. Fjords are characteristically U-shaped valleys, with the lower, slanting part of the U underwater. Walls of fjords often rise vertically for hundreds of feet from the water's edge.

Ed Albert Is Allergic To Monotony

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "I'm allergic to monotony, not to work," says Eddie Albert, an actor who is determined not to let the drudgery of a television series get him down.

Albert stars with Eva Gabor in "Green Acres," another series from the golden - bantam cannery of Paul Henning.

While the new show apparently follows the same surefire formula of bucolic humor, it offers one innovation.

"Cross - pollinization, you might call it," explained Albert, accustomed to agricultural terms. He plays a wealthy New York attorney with a deep urge to return to the soil. Accompanied by his unwilling wife—Gabor—he moves to a farm near Petticoat Junction, of all places.

The innovation is that the Junctioneers make appearances on "Green Acres."

"That gives us a headstart with an established and accomplished set of characters," said Albert. "Also, I think the show should have a strong appeal to the audience. There is a deep basic ingredient in all men: the urge to get close to the soil.

"I've always had it. I have a little garden where I grow vegetables. And I've always wanted to own a small piece of land near the woods—not to make a buck, but to watch things grow."

You can see that Eddie Albert is a philosopher. He brings a thoughtful view to his work as star of a television series. That work is compounded by the nature of "Green Acres." As part of the cross-pollinization, he also appears on every segment of "Petticoat Junction."

"But that doesn't mean that the work must be monotonous," he mused. "Monotony is within one's self. Certainly Thoreau didn't find it monotonous in his little shed at Walden Pond."

The actor practices it in a vigorous way: a mile run along the beach per day, seven minutes of the butterfly stroke in the pool, etc.

Nor does Albert waste the hour's daily drive from his Pacific Palisades home to the studio. He has installed a tape recorder in his car; he records the entire script beforehand and studies his lines en route.

United Funds Aid Many Children

If you were to suddenly discover two young children abandoned in an empty home on a cold January evening, what would you do? Where does a 16-year-old, unmarried mother go if she wants to place her child for adoption, so that she may return to school? Who cares for the six children of a deserting father and an emotionally disturbed mother? Of course, not all the problems are as dramatic, but these and similar problems are worked with by the Pettis County Child Welfare Unit, one of the 13 participating agencies in this year's United Fund campaign.

Funds received by the Child Welfare Unit are used entirely for the needs of children in foster boarding homes, and children, who are wards of the court and have no relatives to help them with medical, dental, clothing and school expenses. Administrative and salary expenses are met jointly by the federal, state and county governments. The Child Welfare Unit does not administer public assistance or welfare payments, such as Aid to Dependent Children.

Child Welfare Services evolved, nationally, in the 1840's, out of the SPCA, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. This was later amended to be the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and Children. It is generally accepted that children should have family life and parental care, adequate housing, health and medical care, education, ethical standards, companionship and legal protection. Through the casework method of the professionally trained social worker at the Child Welfare Unit, the needs of the Sedalia and Pettis County children are being met.

In 1964, 25 children were directly benefitted and cared for by the Pettis County Child Welfare Unit, by money obtained through the United Fund. Only through donations can this program be continued.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nomination of Francis X. Morrissey to be a federal judge is dead for this session as Congress pushes toward adjournment.

President Johnson is back at the White House two weeks after an operation for removal of his gall bladder and a kidney stone.

The imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan says the House committee investigation of his organization is an "inquisition."

MORRISSEY — The White House says President Johnson has no intention to withdraw his nomination of Francis X. Morrissey to be a U.S. district judge in Massachusetts although the nomination was sent back to the Judiciary Committee, on motion of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Kennedy, chief sponsor of Morrissey, in an emotional speech asking the Senate to return the nomination to the committee, said compilation of "a full and complete record" will result in Morrissey's confirmation.

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois and the American Bar Association had questioned Morrissey's qualifications for the federal bench.

CONGRESS — An end to the current session of Congress appears to be only hours away—tonight or Saturday.

Most major bills asked by President Johnson were enacted.

Money was denied, however, to start two programs. One would have provided rent subsidies for low-income families, the other a teachers corps to teaching standards in less-prosperous school areas.

KLAN — Robert M. Shelton, Imperial wizard of the United Klans of America, told newsmen the inquiry by the House Committee on Un-American Activities was loaded with "When did you stop beating your wife" questions.

He described the hearing at which he refused to answer questions as an "inquisition."

Shelton, who has denounced "Fifth Amendment Communists" denied that he was "Fifth Amendment Klansman," saying he was living up to his Klan oath of secrecy.

JOHNSON — President Johnson, two weeks after removal of his gall bladder and a kidney stone, is back in the White House easing into routine of his office.

He plans to take it comparatively easy during four to six weeks of recuperation. It is possible that he will go to Texas for most of the period of convalesence.

CAPITAL QUOTES

"Guys like you have made this nation great" — President Johnson in talking with Marines wounded in Viet Nam.

Rep. Joe D. Waggonner Jr., D-La., in asking an inquiry into the Students for a Democratic Society: "I am mystified as to where they got that title since they are principally, beatniks and unbathed delinquents rather than students."

CAPITOL FOOTNOTES

Spotting of more than 20 sites for Soviet-built antiaricraft missiles in North Viet Nam was reported by informed sources who stressed, however, that most of them were not operational. President Johnson signed a bill to permit the showing in the United States of a U.S. Information Agency film on the life of President John F. Kennedy. U.S. officials report about 25,000 Viet Cong soldiers have been killed in Viet Nam thus far this year. U.S. deaths in the Viet Nam fighting since January 1961 total 830.

ANGLE AMPLIFIES SIZE — An overhead picture amplifies the size of the century-old Perry Co. piano which is used more today as a display rack for music than an instrument. / Mrs. Eckles removed most of the sheet music to accommodate the photographer.

on the real estate or equipment.

"Take that old press for example," she said, pointing to a piece of aged machinery stacked high with waste from the larger press. "Some boys broke into the building and stole the motor and the press has been idle since."

In another corner she pulled open a drawer containing handset type faces now extinct. Nearly a half-inch of dust had settled on the type cases. There were stories still in type locked in chases telling of the accomplishments of great artists. For nearly half a century these have been undisturbed.

There is little historical interest in the Perry Co. locally, although music sales in Sedalia still account for much of the firm's business. "People won't walk anywhere today," Mrs. Eckles notes. "There's no place to park within a block and this has had a big effect on our walk-in trade."

Precisely what is to become of the historically significant publishing house, is a question no one can answer. A Kansas City bank is acting as guardian of the property for surviving Perry heirs. Is local speculation logical that the death knell is about to sound for the firm? When and if it tolls will end a long continuity unequalled in the American music publishing field.

Missionary Work Lecturer Tells of Study Trip Abroad

Mrs. Mary Anne Williams, lecturer on missionary work in foreign countries, was the speaker at the annual Mary Hurlbut luncheon held Tuesday at the Federated Congregational-Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Williams is not a missionary, but at her own expense, has visited missionary fields all over the world to see how the missionary money was being spent.

Although she had never met Miss Mary Hurlbut, who went from that church into missionary work, she said she met a group of 13 young men from Angola, which is in Portuguese West Africa, where Miss Hurlbut served for 35 years or more before her retirement. She pointed out that all denominations of churches send out missionaries to teach and young men like these continue their educations and return on their own. In this group the young men had scholarships and were going into various professions including medical and teaching.

Through pictures Mrs. Williams brought the story of the drastic needs of the people in India, and had slides of the great city of Bombay. People live in miserable slums, she said, but the government now has clinics where the sick are being helped.

She told of a fiber handled similar to cotton. It is combed into skeins, the women dye it and make it into an assortment of things including mats, purses, bags and various other things. Only Christians can be employed and must actually need the work. The children are cared for while the motuhers work.

Slides of the 275 bed hospital showed people on the porch because there was not room. Young men are trained and as soon as they complete their training they are given responsibility. The nurses, Mrs. Williams said, still wear the lovely saries at their work.

A picture of a small place of worship that she showed of a framework of concrete and grass roof, took many years to build with the donation of perhaps a fourth of a bag of cement, or a bag of cement, until it was finished. If the building laid idle there was danger that the government would take it, so a young Christian man, the only Christian in his family, who was a teacher, lived in it and then rode on a bicycle 12 miles each day to teach. Now a woman who preaches lives in it.

The young man had to live at home until his sisters married and now he is free to marry but the parents must select his wife and they insist on one of the Hindu faith.

Although no one is asked to become a Christian the deeds that the Christian missionaries do win people to the faith. When the question arises: "Why not let them live their own lives in their own faith," Mrs. Williams stated that it was such things as 14 year old girls who are married to men many times older who have wives and children, that they hope to do something about, for the young girls become slaves to the wives of these men.

Other pictures were of refugees of different lands. The German man who was given a heifer from this country could not understand how anyone who did not even know him could give him such a gift. The promise with this gift was that the first calf be given to another refugee, and he, in turn, would give the first calf to another refugee.

There was the orphanage in Greece where the girls are taught to make clothes and do other things and the boys are taught a trade.

In Jerusalem clothes that had been sent from this country were sorted and each person was given one outfit which was to do them a year. When the supply was gone, that was it. Mrs. Williams pointed out how necessary it is for the people of this country to send clothes and she asked that they imagine their worst garments and that only one of these must last them a year.

Other pictures were of Hong Kong where there are many refugees and no place to live, but apartment buildings are being built as fast as possible to ease the situation.

Mrs. Williams stressed the importance of churches giving for missionary work in these countries that these people may have an opportunity to create better living conditions for themselves.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. William E. Hurlbut, missionary chairman and sister-in-law of Miss Mary Hurlbut, who said that Miss Hurlbut sent greetings, but was unable to be there because of lectures she was giving in other places. Although she has retired, Mrs. Hurlbut said, she continues to work in the mission field through her lectures.

Mrs. Hurlbut explained that the money from the annual luncheon goes toward helping the students in the area where she was to go on in education that they may return to carry on the work of helping their people.

Mrs. Charles Callis, vice-chairman of the Missionary Guild, presided at the meeting and invocation was given by the new pastor of the church, Rev. Clifford R. Saunders.

Mrs. Callis introduced guests at the head table which included in addition to those previously named, Mrs. Saunders and Mrs. M. G. Albright, wife of the pastor of the United Church of Christ.

Mrs. Myna Yeager sang "The Old Refrain," with Mrs. Morris Lees as accompanist.

There were many from other churches, particularly the Church of Christ, present at the luncheon.

Respect for the Old Bridge

Many old-timers will recognize the authenticity of the above scene in an "Out Our Way" cartoon by J. R. Williams as it applies to the Old Covered Bridge over Flat Creek, south of Sedalia. and adjacent to the water works.

In addition to romantic recollections surrounding this bridge, the areas above and below the structure today stimulate nostalgia. There were the swimming holes where no swimming suits were required, the Boy Scout camp sites, the navigation in home-made canoes almost every Saturday. Then the tired walk back to town, or a lucky hitch-ride on a gravel wagon.

For over 85 years the Old Covered Bridge has been a recreational trade mark. Moreover, it has served it's intended purpose of bearing the burden of horse-drawn, motor vehicle, bicycle and pedestrian traffic over Flat Creek.

Despite remarkable preservation as a result of periodic tender care in upkeep by the Twelve Mile road district, the Old Covered Bridge, built, at an original cost of $4,000, isn't what she used to be.

So, it is apropos to call attention of operators of heavy motor vehicles to the fact that it is dangerous to cross over the bridge with an overload, or to dash through at excessive speed. Two tons to a load and 10 miles for speed is ample.

No one wants to see others have a tragic experience at the Covered Bridge like that one which occurred at the Swinging Bridge near Warsaw recently.

Furthermore, most Central Missourians wouldn't appreciate the bridge being torn up because of careless over-loading or speeding.

Some new and freshly-painted warning signs ought to be placed at both ends of the bridge as a visual suggestion to travelers to give this landmark the respect it deserves.

This respect seems to be lacking lately according to observers. Overloaded vehicles are crossing or speeding over the planks. Weight-warning signs are peppered into unreadability by rifle shots. Speed signs are obliterated.

For historical value as well as for its continued utility the Old Covered Bridge should be given more paternal consideration by the public than it has received lately.

Abortive Coup Costly to the Reds

By RAY CROMLEY
Washington Correspondent
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

WASHINGTON — In September 1948, the Indonesian Communist party almost destroyed itself by an abortive coup against the government.

It took years to recover.

In October 1965, Peking-dominated Communists failed in another hasty armed attempt to take over. This gave the Indonesian army a chance to clamp down hard on the Reds despite the protests of Indonesian President Sukarno.

The October attempt came when the Communists had things going their way. Sukarno was increasing their voice in the government. The Sukarno alliance with Peking was strong and growing tighter. The Communists were winning converts among navy and air officers. Anti-Communist groups had been outlawed. The army's political strength seemed to be on the wane.

The renewed Communist strength was the result of 17 years of slow, careful, energetic building. The Communist head, Dipa Nusantara Aidit, had instilled tight discipline among the members. He had carefully planned his policies (after some bad mistakes) to appeal both to the mercurial Sukarno and to rural Indonesians.

Strangely, the Communists threw a chunk of this slowly won strength away in a poorly planned, premature coup.

We tend to think of Communists as patient people who work underground for decades, biding their time for a take-over.

This is often true. But, sooner or later, you can count on the Reds to come up with a whopper of a blunder.

Some of their people get impatient and move too quickly.

Chinese-sponsored Communists have made this same mistake of jumping the gun in some parts of Africa and Latin America.

Despite its setback, the Indonesian Communist party is far from dead. It has 1,500,000 members. (The three million figure often quoted is a fraud.) It has built the backing of the farmers in some areas by pushing the taking of land from the rich (and from foreigners) and giving it to the poor. Rival parties are in sad shape.

The Communists will be able to feed on Indonesia's continuous economic chaos and political instability.

The Indonesian Communists may now simply turn from Peking to Moscow for leadership.

So the battle for weaning Indonesia from the Reds is far from won.

But these Red boo-boos give the United States an opportunity (or repeated opportunities). If the United States develops for Indonesia and the other underdeveloped countries of Asia, Latin America and Africa a long-range policy of helping to build sound democratic governments and persists despite setbacks, in the long run the Communists will likely stub their toes.

Looking Backward

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Senator Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, co-sponsor of the well-known farm bill and Republican vice-presidential nominee, was honor guest at a luncheon at Hotel Bothwell. John T. Martin, president of the Pettis County Willkie club, Carl G. Schrader and E. W. Thompson went to Kansas City on an early train to accompany the senator and his party to Sedalia. Senator McNary was seated between Ed Goetz, of Smithton, Republican central committee chairman, and Mr. Martin. Included among the guests were Mayor Julian H. Bagby representing the city of Sedalia, and George H. Trader, representing the Chamber of Commerce of which he is president.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The annual meeting of the Pettis County Farm Bureau met at Convention Hall Liberty park because it was impossible to furnish heat in the Coliseum at the Fair Grounds where the meeting was originally scheduled. Two hundred representatives from 16 townships attended. Election of officers resulted as follows: President, L. H. Haggard; Vice-President, W. D. Walkup; Secretary-Treasurer, M. D. Norton. Directors from the township were elected as follows: Smithton, Mrs. C. E. Lamm and Joe Monsees; Prairie, E. B. Read and Mrs. H. H. Taylor; Cedar, R. N. Gentry and Mrs. Guy Berry; Bowling Green, Ernest Thompson and Mrs. Ed Ferguson; LaMonte, T. H. Bradshaw and Mrs. George Landes; Longwood, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Pottenger; Sedalia, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Helman; Washington, J. F. Howe; Blackwater, C. J. Wheeler and Mrs. B. S. Hall; Elk Fork, Mr. and Mrs. John Purchase; Green Ridge, W. D. Walkup; Heaths Creek, Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Jenkins; Houstonia, Mrs. M. W. Benning and George Janisch; Hughesville, George W. Landes and Mrs. S. W. McClure; White townshop, Benton county, J. C. Strine and Mrs. J. T. Wood; Dresden, George Feaster and Mrs. Clyde Ferguson.

9 Weeks 'til Christmas

By POLLY CRAMER
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

DEAR GIRLS — We have to face it. There are only 9 weeks until Christmas. In between will be Halloween and Thanksgiving, which require a certain amount of our time, thus delaying Christmas holiday preparations. Although Dec. 25 really is not too far off, many of you are probably thinking, "How can I get the Christmas spirit in October?" You probably can't and neither can I. But we should start budgeting our time and money so that everything gets done without last-minute rushing. The result will be worth it and we will have more of the true spirit of Christmas when that great day rolls around.

It is not one bit too soon to start working on that gift list so as to be ready when there is time for a bit of shopping. Many readers tell us they jot down preferences and desires expressed by family and friends throughout the year.

First on the list should be those whose gifts must be mailed to faraway places. The wise shopper always considers the size and ease of packing when buying for out-of-towners.

We would all do well to print a card to remind us of mailing deadlines as set by the Post Office Dept. and tack this in a prominent place. The limit for mailing gift packages and greeting cards to the armed forces overseas is Nov. 10, except for air mail which can go between Dec. 1 and 10. Out-of-town packages should be mailed between Nov. 29 and Dec. 5 and out-of-town cards by Dec. 10. Local packages should be on their way by Dec. 14 and local cards by Dec. 15.

Now is the time to work out a "swapping" arrangement with a good friend or neighbor. Perhaps when cookie baking time comes each will make double the amount of different kinds and then swap. A plan might be worked out between two mothers of preschool children so they will plan to Christmas shop on different days and leave all the children with the one staying at home that day. Twice as much can be accomplished in a day by shopping alone.

Russo-Finn Canal Deal A Success

NUIJAMA, Finland (AP) — A unique real estate deal with the Communists slowly is bringing back to life a once-flourishing waterway in this Finnish-Soviet border region.

Now on both sides of the border here Finnish workmen are busy clearing and widening the channel and rebuilding locks that fell into disrepair during 20 years of idleness. The job is scheduled to be finished by 1968.

The pact, in which the Kremlin cedes for the first time Soviet territory for use by others in exchange for money, was signed in September, 1962. It has been claimed as one of the policy of strict neutrality.

Before the war, the Saimaa Canal, which links the Karelian Lake district with the Baltic port of Vyborg, was on Finnish territory. But under the 1947 Treaty of Paris, defeated Finland had to yield part of Karelia, including the port of Vyborg and half of the canal, to the Soviet Union.

The 1962 agreement will enable Finland and other non-Soviet vessels to use the canal in return for annual payment of at least $200,000. The sum will be upped if traffic exceeds one million tons annually.

In 1939, the last year of peace, 84 per cent of the freight that moved through the Saimaa Canal was timber destined for export.

The Little Spook

'Twas the night for spooks
And the little ghost
Had a chance to do
What he wanted to most —
He wanted to last year,
And the year before, too,
But the big spooks said:
"We can't bother with you —
You are too little,
"You'd get lost, you see,
"And when Spook Night is over
"Then where would you be?"
But this year he cried
And his great big sobs shook him
Till at last they gave in
And the big old spooks took him;
He washed out his spook robe
Until it was clean,
So he was all ready
For a big Halloween,
He went to the meeting
Where all the spooks met,
There were witches with cats
Black and shiny like jet,
There were bats with wide wing spread,
And owls with green eyes,
There were funny old goblins
But nobody his size—
His Big Jack-'o-lantern
Had a funny old grin
With a very bright light
A-burning with-in;
Then came a big noise
And they all disappeared,
There all by himself
Things seemed mighty weird—
There were people about—
Little people like him
With the funniest clothes,
Faces ugly and grim,
He wasn't quite sure
Just what he should do —
No one seemed to get scared
When he hollered: "Boo!"
That he was a spook
Nobody cared less,
Up to doors they would go
And buttons they'd press—
So he went to doors, too,
And did the same thing,
Sure enough the door
Wide open would swing,
And someone gave him candy
Or apples or gum,
So he gathered his robe up
Between finger and thumb,
Everybody just laughed
When "Boo!" he would shout,
Like he wasn't a real spook
Wandering about,
Finally streets were all empty
And houses were dark,
He took all his loot
And went to the park,
And that's where they found him
When came the dawn light
The poor little spook
Worn out from the night
The big spooks had looked
For him everywhere
And then at last found him
Fast to sleep there,
So that's how a stray dog
Had plenty to eat
For the real little spook
Couldn't take back his treat,
But when Halloween comes
Now he's very content
To simply not go
Since the one time he went.

FINDING THE WAY

The Trouble Is ...

By RALPH W. LOWE, D.D.
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

There's enough trouble in the world without borrowing a load from the unknown future. Yet so much of our efforts to move ahead in dramatic and creative ways is hampered by our fretting. We become amnesiacs concerning our past and neurotics about the future.

Talk to some people about urban renewal and they begin worrying about what will happen to the tax rolls. Discuss integration of the races with others and they worry about intermarriage. Demonstrate the need of helping our neighbors in other countries to build roads, establish schools and better their social situation and someone raises the possibility of being influenced by communism!

We're as distracted as those two military officers in the motion picture, "Dr. Strangelove." With nuclear bombs exploding about them, these two chaps spent the time discussing the dangers of fluoridization of water!

Borrowing trouble is like the undertaking of an unnecessary mortgage for which there is no possible financing.

Borrowing trouble is like trying to pick up a heavy load for which there is no equivalent muscle — power. At best it creates a kind of spiritual hernia; at worst, it causes a complete collapse.

No wonder Jesus could proclaim, "So do not be anxious about tomorrow; tomorrow will look after itself. Each day has troubles enough of its own."

A friend of mine is a medical student. He tells me that he has had many bouts with this business of borrowing trouble. A disease is described and he has the symptoms. A malformation is explained and he senses the same pains. Mention the malady and he feels it.

His problem is a common one. The whole business of borrowing symptoms until we cannot tell whether we're sick or just think we're sick, is a neurotic obsession. What happens to the individual in his body also happens to the body of our neighborhoods and cities.

There is a story in the New Testament of a rich young ruler who asked about eternal values and discovered in Jesus' answer that the answer had something to do with present values. Jesus told him to sell what he had, to get his heart out of his worries about his possessions and to live in a new kind of freedom. The story tells us that "he went away sorrowing for he had great possessions."

I think about that when I hear some of the debates about helping our neighbors or living with others on this planet. What will happen to us? Who will take care of us? We borrow trouble instead of receiving wisdom.

Borrowing trouble is always sinful. It separates us from what we might be, paralyzing us instead of invigorating us. Faith is more than a body of beliefs about God; faith is actually trust. This is a moment to demonstrate it.

Close Contract Needs Study

By JACOBY & SON
1965 Vanderbilt Cup Winners
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

The Italian bidding of the next to last hand of the match got them to another close game contract. We are not sure as to the exact meaning of North's three heart bid. Apparently South was sufficiently impressed by it to jump to four spades.

West opened the jack of spades. South won with the king and proceeded to give the hand a most careful study. If you have already looked at all four hands you will see that four spades makes easily. South must lose a spade, a club and a diamond. Piero Forquet of Italy was not looking at all the hands and he had quite a problem.

His final solution was elegant. At trick two he led a club toward dummy. West ducked and dummy's queen held the trick. Then he took the diamond finesse. He did not expect that it would succeed and his expectations were realized. West won with the king and led a second spade. Forquet won, cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond. He returned to his hand by ruffing a heart and led a club. West took his ace and Forquet claimed all the rest of the tricks except East's high trump.

The basis of his play was that he assumed that East would hold three spades and possibly only one club. In that case he could afford to have a club ruffed since it would be ruffed by what would otherwise have been a trump trick. The last hand of the match was a standoff and the Italians had won again.

Review of Week's News

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

For a man of such energy, it only seemed like a slow recovery. It really wasn't. The doctors had told President Johnson not to leave the hospital for two weeks after his gall-bladder operation, so he didn't.

When he went home Thursday, there was a spring to his step and a smile on his face. Nonetheless, he went right to bed and plans to take it easy for several more weeks until he fully regains his strength.

It wasn't all rest for the President during his final week at Bethesda Naval Medical Center. He signed a sheaf of bills — seven the night before he left — including a $3.2-billion foreign-aid appropriations bill. He stressed that he was opposed to any sort of "international dole" and that future U.S. aid would reward countries that undertook economic and social reforms. Back at the White House, he signed the $320-million highway beautification bill and gave his wife the first pen he had used.

It was a curious victory for an old pro, Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois. He won the fight without having the votes.

The fight was over the nomination to the federal bench of Judge Francis X. Morrissey, a friend and political crony of the Kennedys. At Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's urging, President Johnson had submitted the nomination, and Dirksen led the howls of protest. Morrissey, he said, was unfit by either training or experience.

During the week the FBI supported Morrissey's testimony before a Senate committee about his early legal studies in Georgia, and it appeared confirmation was assured. But on Thursday Sen. Kennedy, his voice choked, said that even though he had the votes, he wanted the nomination to be sent back to committee for further study. The federal bench, Kennedy said, must be above reproach and there simply had been too much controversy.

The government's investigation of the Ku Klux Klan, requested by President Johnson last spring, opened at midweek with a fascinating explanation of terms used in the invisible empire — such as kludds, klokards and klabees — and provided at week's end the dramatic spectacle of a klansman renouncing his membership from the witness stand.

First witnesses in the hearing, including Imperial Wizard Robert M. Shelton Jr. of Alabama, refused repeatedly to testify. But when Joseph G. DuBois of Goldsboro, N.C., took the stand, he told the House Committee on Un-American Activities he wanted to resign and to turn over to them his records as treasurer of his local unit. He did so, he said, "with the full cooperation of the local unit."

While the entire Klan was under investigation in Washington, one member, Collie Leroy Wilkins Jr., was acquitted Friday in Hayneville, Ala., of the March 25 murder of Viola Gregg Liuzzo, a white civil rights worker from Detroit, slain after the Selma-to-Montgomery march.

The trial, Wilkins' second on the same charge, began with an unsuccessful effort by Alabama Atty. Gen. Richmond Flowers to disqualify from the jury anyone who said he believed in white supremacy.

Pressing for quick affirmation of the 1965 voting-rights act's constitutionality, the Justice Department Thursday asked the Supreme Court to take up the case without prior testing in lower courts. Atty. Gen. Nicholas de B. Katzenbach also asked the justices to nullify orders handed down recently in the state courts of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana obstructing the act.

It was only the 15th time in history the original jurisdiction shortcut had been sought. All previous times the high court had agreed to hear the cases.

Throughout the week verbal fire from all directions exploded around the various beat-the-draft groups in the news recently.

First, the President issued a statement deploring their behavior, then the Senate leaders of both parties made critical speeches, the United Church of Christ added its voice, then the United Auto Workers, and across the land various groups began donating blood, signing petitions and otherwise voicing support for U.S. policies in Viet Nam.

It was a successful week on the battle front. The United States lost a fighter-bomber in a raid on North Viet Nam, but on Wednesday Viet Cong guerrillas suffered heavy losses in action about 400 miles north of Saigon.

At home, the former Air Force chief of staff, Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, said in a speech that American air power was being used incorrectly in Viet Nam. Our strikes are "too little and too late," he said, are aimed at the wrong targets, and are killing people who shouldn't be killed.

There was a spate of other news from abroad during the week.

In Indonesia, a ban was put on the Communist party, but it wasn't clear whether the move was ordered by President Sukarno or by a group of generals who appeared to have assumed much of the president's power.

In the Dominican Republic, army troops battled with extreme leftists in fighting reminiscent of last April's outburst. The inter-American peace force was alerted but avoided involvement in the fighting.

And in another short-lived uprising, Premier Leopold Biha of Burundi was reported gravely wounded during an outburst in the land-locked African country.

The Swedish Royal Academy Thursday named three Americans and a Japanese Nobel prize winners in physics and chemistry. Robert Burns Woodward of Harvard won the chemistry prize; the physics prize was shared among Julian Seymour Schwinger of Harvard, Richard Phillips Feynman of the California Institute of Technology, and Hinichero Tomonaga of the Tokyo Education University.

Quote of the week:

"When . . . I issue the orders that you carry out, I do it with a heavy heart." — President Johnson, to wounded Marines at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

NEW VITA-FERM BEEF
MORE TENDER-MORE FLAVOR

BETTER BEEF "NATURALLY"
BECAUSE IT'S TENDERIZED
BY NATURE

Yes, Vita-Ferm Beef is better beef "naturally" because no anti-biotics, drugs or chemicals are used to artificially attempt to tenderize the meat. The only addition to the normal grain and forage consumed by cattle on a Vita-Ferm beef feeding program is a specific amount of an enzyme product called Vita-Ferm. This naturally grown and concentrated product is available as Vita-Ferm added to grain, or GX Preservative added to silage. Either of these products simply supplement and assist the normal enzymes normally produced in the digestive systems of beef cattle to more efficiently take advantage of the nutritive value of the feed they eat. By allowing cattle to get more digestible nutrients out of every pound of grain or forage, Vita-Ferm helps to put on extra pounds of beef in a much shorter feeding period. The animal is healthier because of more efficient feed utilization, and the beef produced is more tender — naturally.

THIS VITA-FERM(r) BEEF HAS BEEN PRODUCED BY LOCAL CATTLE FEEDERS USING FARM GROWN GRAIN AND FORAGE PLUS THE ADDITION OF A NATURALLY PRODUCED ENZYME PRODUCT CALLED "BIO-ZYME(r)". THIS REVOLUTIONARY NEW FEEDING PROGRAM IS NATURE'S WAY OF TENDERIZING AND FLAVORING MEAT.

HOW DOES THE CATTLE FEEDER BENEFIT? A Vita-Ferm beef feeding program enables the small farmer as well as the large farmer to raise choice cattle at a lower cost. The addition of Vita-Ferm enzymes to a controlled feeding program of grain and forage helps cattle convert fibrous crops into digestable carbohydrates, and also get more of a balanced protein intake from natural feeds. This means better, faster and cheaper gains from farm feeds — a shorter feeding period to produce quality cattle.

WHAT ABOUT THE LOCKER PLANT OPERATOR? Locker operators who have handled Vita-Ferm fed beef have noticed that these cattle produce carcasses with well marbled meat, and yet do not have the waste fat of equally graded cattle fed by conventional methods. They can offer their locker customers more quality edible meat per pound of meat purchased.

HOW DOES VITA-FERM BEEF RATE IN THE MEAT MARKET? Here too, the story is more saleable quality meat per carcass and less wasty fat. One meat market operator reported cutting down waste fat 15 to 20 pounds on a half of beef. In addition, other reports say that the eat holds its color longer in the meat case — it's more appetizing to the shopper.

DOES VITA FERM BEEF SATISFY THE CONSUMER? Whether the all-important consumer buys Vita-Ferm beef from a locker plant, a local meat market, or eats it in a restaurant, he or she gets more edible quality meat per penny spent. The whole quality story of Vita-Ferm beef hinges on tenderness and flavor at a savings. Restaurants, as well as housewives, say it takes less heat and less time to cook it—that a pound of Vita-Ferm hamburger goes farther than a pound of regular hamburger. As to steaks and roasts, they're incomparable in taste and tenderness — and cheaper, because there's more meat to eat, and less fat to throw away.

HERE'S WHAT THEY SAY ABOUT VITA-FERM(R) BEEF

PAUL WALTERS — Pacific Cafe

"In our 25 years of cooking experience, we have never cooked beef that cooked as quick with so little shrinkage as Vita-Ferm beef. Customers say the steaks are out of this world."

JIM HIERONYMUS — Cattle Feeder

"My cattle are definitely healthier on a Vita-Ferm beef feeding program. Coats are smooth, eyes are bright. They're thrifty feeders and good gainers."

BEN TROUT — Welch's Market

"What we like is the repeat business we get. Once our customers get a taste of Vita-Ferm beef, they just don't ask for other cuts of meat."

HAROLD FRICKE—Pettis County Locker System

"The Vita-Ferm fed cattle we now have hanging have good marbling throughout. All have good healthy livers, and a minimum of exterior and interior fat."

(10) I seldom offer my help to the club leader.

If you marked yes to five or more of these 10 statements, I would predict that your boy or girl will not complete their 4-H club work this year.

The Two Worlds of Margaret and Tony

WHAT IN THE WORLD!

By ALLEN GARVIN

Michael Caine, spy

Serialized Spies We're in for a run of spies. The success of the James Bond film sagas has convinced Hollywood that there's money in releasing whole series of spy movies, each taking 008—or what have you—into new adventures. The films also help to pile up big grosses for re-releases of earlier films (Bond's "Dr. No" made more money the second time around than the first). Actor Michael Caine, who plays a spy in the just-released "Ipcress File" thriller, has already been signed to play the same spy in two more films. And that old jack-of-all-trades, Dean Martin, is shooting "The Silencers," the first of a series of films based on the Matt Helm spy stories.

Dean Martin, spy

Styled by Mrs. St. Laurent Where do the world's great fashion designers (most of whom are male) get their best ideas? Well, if the experience of Yves St. Laurent is any indication, the concepts come from Mother. Mrs. St. Laurent gave her bespectacled, 29-year-old son a book on the French artist, Mondrian, to read, and he adopted Mondrian's rectangular look for his fall line. St. Laurent's styles were instantly acclaimed as a hit by the press. Which leads one to ask: wonder what Mother's reading for next season?

Met Mementos The New York Metropolitan Opera has just opened the final season at its old opera house before moving to a new building. But already it is being besieged by memento hunters. They've written, called, and telegraphed asking for pieces of the curtain,the chandeliers, "seats 0-13 and 0-15 which my mother and father occupied for some 30-odd years." A committee has been set up to investigate ways to dispose of the furnishings. One idea: they may chop up the curtain into 27,000 pieces and use them as covers for a memorial record album.

Save Your Confederate Money, Men Confederate bills have both made and lost money for their owners in recent weeks. Officials of a radio station in San Antonio were fined for litterbugging a shopping-center parking lot with Confederate bills that were redeemable for goods. Meanwhile, in London, a man finally decided that the Confederacy was not going to rise again. At an auction, he sold family-owned Confederate bonds—42 sheets worth $30,000 at time of issue—for only $224.

Should Physicians Make House Calls? As far as FAMILY WEEKLY readers are concerned—both laymen and medical men—the answer is a resounding "Yes!" The question was posed in an article in the Aug. 22 issue and took cognizance of an increasing tendency among doctors to discourage house visits. Readers were asked what they thought about it, and 97.3 percent of the laymen who responded favored house calls. "In the Hippocratic oath, in which doctors swear to aid the sick," wrote a Waterloo, Iowa, reader, "nothing is said about doing so only between the hours of 9 and 5." Among doctors, the "yes" vote was 90 percent. "A family doctor should be as near as the telephone," wrote a Columbia, S.C., doctor. "However, I tell patients who call me in the middle of the night, 'If you aren't sick when I arrive, you will be when you get my bill.' "

Walker Wins One Actor Clint Walker, recently in Mysore, India, to make an MGM film, was approached by a moaning beggar with his pitiful limbs dragging and his eyes rolling wildly as he held out his hand. Walker told a translator: "Explain to the beggar that I have no money to give but that, as an actor, I applaud the superb performance." When the "beggar" heard the translation, he pulled himself erect, snorted with offended dignity, lit a cigarette, and walked away!

Margaret backstage in 1951

What Ever Happened to Margaret Truman? Albeit a little older, Margaret Truman was the Lynda Bird Johnson of her era. That was two decades ago, when her peppery father was the master of the White House. Show-business inclined, Margaret sang on stage and radio—with Daddy firing off letters to critics who dared to observe that her voice was not absolutely the greatest. Now the mother of three and wife of a New York newspaper editor, she still does a little summer-stock acting, plus a good deal of tv and radio work. "I argue with my mother," Margaret says. "We disagree about the children, and I remind her that she had only one child, plus lots of help, while I have three, and I work, too . . ."

The Wayward Sons A new singing group, The Wayward Sons, will definitely not be available for personal appearances no matter how well their first platter, just recorded, sells. They cut their first disc under armed guard. The foursome, all prisoners in the Maryland Penitentiary, met in jail and began singing. The earliest freedom date for any of them is some 10 years away. Their first two recorded songs: "Not Sympathy" and "How Well I Know."

THE TWO WORLDS OF MARGARET AND TONY

The official life of Margaret and Tony includes such duties as presiding at an exhibit opening (top), being "on display" in a motorcade (above), and putting in an appearance at a formal ball (left).

WHEN PRINCESS Margaret flies into San Francisco on Nov. 4 for her first visit to the U.S., Americans will be seeing perhaps the only member of the British royal family who has managed to build a full life of her own.

At 35 the Queen's younger sister bears little resemblance to the girlish princess whose scrapes and romances once earned her headlines around the world. Marriage and motherhood have given Margaret the mature beauty that befits a member of the English monarchy.

At the same time, she has acquired a new sophistication under the deft guidance of her husband, the former Antony Armstrong-Jones (now Lord Snowdon), who has a photographer's trained eye for feminine charm. Heavy make-up accentuates her beautiful eyes, and her hair is exquisitely styled. When she steps off the plane in San Francisco, she will be wearing an ultra-smart wardrobe that was especially designed for her American visit by the royal fashion expert, Norman Hartnell.

Today, Margaret manages to live in two entirely different worlds: the formal and sometimes stuffy world of royal pomp and ceremony and the gay, high-spirited world of theatrical rehearsals, photographic sessions, and carefree Mediterranean holidays to which she has been introduced by her restless young husband.

The two worlds of Margaret and Tony were never more clearly revealed than during a recent theater outing in London. With them, on one side, were Queen Elizabeth and her husband Prince Philip. On the other side sat comedian Peter Sellers and his wife Britt Eklund.

Margaret is reported even to have acted in an amateur movie with Sellers. He and Britt are, in fact, among Margaret's and Tony's closest friends.

If Margaret has her way—and being Margaret, the odds are that she will—her forthcoming American visit will similarly combine these two different worlds. Neat and demure, smiling and formal, she will carry out the official functions arranged for her. But in between, still smiling but considerably more informal, she will indulge in her own special brand of fun—perhaps a visit to a film studio, certainly an evening at one of New York's famous night clubs.

She has already made it clear that she does not want a jet plane specially converted and placed exclusively at her disposal, as happens when the Queen flies out on a royal visit. Instead, Margaret and Tony, with a minimum of staff (a maid, a valet, and a personal secretary) will fly from London to San Francisco as first-class passengers on a routine British Overseas Airways flight.

Close friends report Margaret was delighted when it was first suggested that she should visit the United States to help boost British prestige.

"I'm quite excited about it," she told one acquaintance. "I've always wanted to see America, and I've never had the opportunity before."

Years ago, there was vague talk that she might visit here, but the idea was allowed to lapse. Margaret, at the time, was considered too unpredictable. She still is a shade unpredictable, but age and marriage have mellowed her.

Her American visit is an official one, which means that her principal engagements—in San Francisco, Los Angeles, New York, and Washington (where she will pay a courtesy call on President Johnson)—have been arranged for her by the British government.

But Margaret also has been busy herself planning a number of off-duty jaunts. Foremost among them will be a reunion with her old friend Sharman Douglas. Between official engagements, Margaret will head for the Douglas home near Tucson, Ariz., to spend a few days with Sharman.

Margaret and Sharman have been close friends for more than 16 years. They first met when Sharman's father was U.S. ambassador in London and still laughingly recall the "scandal" they caused at one party when they dressed up in net stockings, frilly panties, short dresses, and feathered bonnets to perform a high-kicking cancan.

Lord Snowdon also will be carrying out engagements arranged for him by the British government while he and Margaret are here. But, in addition, he will bring over his cameras to shoot a photo-spread for the London Sunday Times, for which he works.

Five years ago, when Princess Margaret married Tony Armstrong-Jones in ancient Westminster Abbey, the prophets of gloom were out in force. The marriage, they prophesied, would never last. And if it did, it would be only at the expense of Margaret's royal duties, which she would neglect in favor of a Bohemian way of life.

Neither prophecy has come true. Margaret, far from neglecting her royal duties, has brought a new and refreshing touch of informality into the stereotyped royal round. And the unexpected love match between her and Tony has successfully stood the test of time.

Many intimate friends of the couple say that Margaret and Tony are as much in love today as they ever were. And the birth of two children has cemented their happiness. Not long ago, Margaret told one of her friends, "I hope to have as many children as my sister" (the Queen has four).

In the past five years, Margaret, with Tony as her guide, has seen something of a world she never dreamed existed—artists' parties in London's Chelsea district and playful jaunts through tiny, musty antique shops. She has ridden on the back of a motorcycle and learned the tricky art of water skiing.

With it all, she has still contrived to remain regal and dignified on regal and dignified occasions. She will spend a morning darting through London's traffic in Tony's mini-car and, come afternoon, make a suitably stately arrival at some official function in one of their two luxurious Rolls-Royces.

Of course, such deft dovetailing of two opposite worlds has not been achieved without weathering a number of storms, both personal and public. Some of her actions, such as the money spent on her new home at Kensington Palace, have brought loud screams of public protest. Others have attracted lower, more muted rumblings from the direction of Buckingham Palace, where the Queen and Prince Philip reside.

But the recent amicable theater outing of the two sisters and their husbands, in company with Peter Sellers and Britt Eklund, pulled the rug out from under the rumors that the royal couples are not on the best of terms.

True, there was a time when Tony's erratic handling of a gun in the hunting field annoyed Philip. Also, Philip was irritated by his brother-in-law's late-rising habits.

Philip likes to be up almost at the crack of dawn. Tony, by contrast, is inclined to start his day late. The first time they went pheasant shooting together, Tony was late putting in an appearance and Philip got tired of waiting.

"He can follow under his own steam!" Philip grumbled as he drove off alone. But today the two men get along well enough.

Not long ago, we had occasion to visit Kensington Palace, where Tony and Margaret live. We found it a mixture of the regal and the homey. In the front hall hung a portrait of Princess Margaret—and beneath it stood her small son's well-worn kiddie car.

Tony was in his study. He showed us his picture spread of the ballet dancer Nureyev, taken in Vienna. He talked enthusiastically about the new $350,000 aviary he designed and helped build for London's zoo.

"Have you seen it yet?" he asked. "What do you think of it?"

Tony himself prefers to be known as Tony Snowdon rather than as the more formal Lord Snowdon. Not long ago, when he and Margaret were weekending at Windsor Castle, they took a stroll beside the Thames and came upon some workmen varnishing a boat.

While Margaret looked on admiringly, Tony snapped away with his camera. Then he and Margaret sat with the workmen in the boathouse, sharing a pot of tea.

Later a set of color photographs turned up for the workmen. Attached was a note: "With the compliments of Tony Snowdon."

Such refreshing royal informality should appeal to Margaret's and Tony's American hosts. ◆

The U.S. is about to get its first visit from Britain's "rebel princess," a girl who has mellowed a bit—but who still wouldn't pass up a good party or a motorcycle ride!

By GRAHAM and HEATHER FISHER

The unofficial—and very informal—side of Margaret's and Tony's life includes a ride on the London subway to visit friends (above) and a holiday at a fashionable Swiss resort (left).

Hollywood's Answer to James Bond

Burt Reynolds runs along high ledges, swims crocodile-infested waters —anything to pay back the profession which kept him "from becoming a bum"

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

HE HUNTS international spies, swims crocodile-infested rivers, embraces beautiful women, dodges poisonous snakes—and his name is neither James Bond nor Sean Connery.

On screen, he is Mark Andrews, the American Central Intelligence agent in Allied Artists' "Operation CIA." Off screen, he is Burt Reynolds, a swarthy, ruggedly handsome 29-year-old actor who many in Hollywood predict has the same kind of magic that Sean Connery had when he took on the 007 role.

Comparatively unknown, Reynolds is an actor who works incredibly hard. He figures he owes something to his audience and to show business, which, by his own admission, kept him "from becoming a bum."

Burt grew up in Florida and attended Florida State College, where he was a top athlete. His early ambition to become a professional football player and eventually a coach was cut short by a highway accident. He was driving a car one night when a truck suddenly loomed ahead on the road, and he crashed into it. At the hospital, he was on the operating table seven hours and pronounced dead once. When he finally pulled through, he was told he would never be able to play professional football because of damaged cartilage in his right knee.

Burt fell into a deep depression. As he recalls it: "I feared that if I just gave up—deep down inside I knew the doctors were right—people would lose interest in me and consider me a failure. Moreover, every time I thought I was about adjusted to my condition, something happened to set me back."

One day, for example, his father, who was the local police chief, had a tv set installed in Burt's hospital room so he could watch the New Year's Day bowl games. But this kindness only left him feeling worse.

When Burt was finally discharged from the hospital, all his athletic ambitions had evaporated. There was no future to look forward to, and, as far as he was concerned, no past worth remembering. He became more and more depressed, turned to drinking, and got into fights.

For a while he thought of leaving Florida and going to a different state or maybe abroad to continue his education. But one day a thought occurred to him: if he would enroll in a school that had no athletic team, maybe he would stop thinking about football.

When he discussed this with his father, the elder Reynolds suggested nearby Palm Beach Junior College. Burt decided it would be only fair to himself and his family to give it a try.

At first it looked as if his decision was a mistake. He lacked concentration in his classes, took part in few extracurricular activities, and kept mostly to himself. But about the time he decided to drop his courses and look for something else to occupy his time, his English professor asked him to read for a role in the college production of "Outward Bound." Out of politeness, rather than interest, Burt promised to study the script.

To everyone's surprise, including his own, Burt became so engrossed in his part that he gave the best reading of anyone trying for the role. His subsequent performance earned him the Florida Drama Award as the year's best actor in a junior college. Suddenly he had a new purpose in life.

He won a scholarship to the Hyde Park Playhouse in New York, graduated to a supporting role in "Mr. Roberts" with Charlton Heston at New York's City Center, and made a screen test for 20th Century-Fox. By his own admission, "it was the worst piece of acting I have ever seen." But he continued his dramatic studies until he got his first big break on NBC's "Riverboat" tv series.

That show lasted two years. He then costarred as the blacksmith in "Gunsmoke" for another two years and appeared in a number of films. During those years, his biggest problem seemed to be what at first had appeared to be his biggest asset—his resemblance to Marlon Brando.

Repeatedly producers complimented him on his talent but turned him down for roles because of his resemblance to Brando. It was not until Marlon's own career started to slip that Burt got a chance to prove himself.

Burt's physical condition helped. Despite the accident that cut short his football career, he is in better physical shape today than most other Hollywood actors. He is one of the few who does his own stunts—much to the consternation of his pretty wife Judy, an English actress whom he met on a personal-appearance tour.

When "Operation CIA" was being filmed in Thailand, Burt fell down stair wells, jumped off 15-foot roofs, and battled one of Hollywood's top stunt men, Bill Catching, in sizzling 120-degree heat. Nor did he shrink from such dangerous exploits as running across a narrow ledge atop a seven-story hotel in a harrowing chase sequence, getting a poisonous cobra thrown at him, or being tossed into the crocodile-infested Bangkok River.

No wonder the producer of "Operation CIA" took an option on him for four more films! How often can you find an actor who really performs like James Bond? ◆

We hear you'd like a girl your own age to tell you about Tampax

She'll be easy to find. She's the one who wears all the snazzy new fashions, is up on the latest dances, and seems to be thoroughly enjoying herself every single day.

Frankly, we'd rather have her speak for us than speak for ourselves. She may not dwell too long on the advantages of Tampax menstrual tampons. She knows you must be aware of them, or you wouldn't be asking about Tampax. But she will explain usage and absorbency and all sorts of things.

And will you do us a great big favor? Will you tell her how proud and grateful Tampax is that she takes this attitude about the product we cherish so much. We'd tell her ourselves, but we don't know how to reach her—except through you. Thank you very much.

Bringing Up Baby®

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF 5

Bonny baby feet . . . beautiful to behold . . . worth keeping that way. To insure proper development of little feet, selection of footwear is important.

• For wee ones. A couple of pairs of socks or bootees for cool days, otherwise bare feet. Foot freedom gives baby a chance to kick, stretch and curl toes, important aspects of foot development.

• For creepers. Soft-soled shoes with pliable uppers to protect tender toes and ankles . . . permit easy foot flexing.

• For toddlers. Firm but flexible-soled, high shoes . . . wide at the toes and straight along inside soles for "steady-as-she-goes" support.

Growing idea. Protein is one of the big nutritional factors in growth and the development of all body structures. Gerber Strained and Junior High Meat Dinners are good sources of this important nutrient. Know why? Because they have three times as much meat as regular vegetable and meat combinations. Selected vegetables are deftly blended with the meat for flavor supreme and additional nutritional benefits. Five to thrive: Veal, Beef, Chicken, Turkey and Ham.

Fitting story. Tykes outgrow shoes quickly, so it's a good idea to check for fit every few weeks. Telltale signs that signal the need for new shoes: (1) Tightness across instep and toes. (2) No grow room at toes. (3) Wrinkled leather, bulging sides, sagging heels.

A word from Dan Gerber. "You'd be surprised at the many checks we make on the raw materials used in your baby's foods. Checks to insure quality, purity and nutritive values. Egg yolks, for example, are purchased according to our own strict specifications. First, we test a sample batch of yolks for freshness, cleanliness, flavor, color and nutritive values. Even if the eggs pass the initial tests, final shipments are tested again before they are accepted. Yes, when you buy Gerber, you're sure of your money's worth in nourishment." YOU MAY HAVE

PIN-WORMS AND NOT KNOW IT

Fidgeting, loss of sleep and a tormenting itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms . . . ugly parasites that medical experts say infest 1 out of every 3 persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, they must be killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do . . . and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly and easily.

Don't take chances with dangerous, highly contagious Pin-Worms which infect entire families. Get genuine Jayne's P-W Vermifuge . . . small, easy-to-take tablets . . . special sizes for children and adults.

The fabled witches of Halloween will fly their brooms across the sky no faster than Mother or Big Sister can deep fry one or more of these treats, keeping festive baskets filled with Orange Doughnuts, Funnel Cakes, or Deep-Fried Apple Pies.

How to Deep Fry

When using an automatic deep fryer, follow manufacturer's directions for type and amount of fat and timing. Or, about 20 min. before ready to deep fry, fill a deep saucepan one-half to two-thirds full with hydrogenated vegetable shortening, all-purpose shortening, lard, or cooking oil for deep frying. Heat fat slowly to temperature given in recipe, 365° to 375°F. A deep-frying thermometer is an accurate guide for correct temperature to be maintained during cooking.

Orange Doughnuts

1 pkg. hot roll mix
2 tablespoons grated orange peel
Pieces of jellied-orange slices
Orange Glaze (see recipe)

1. Prepare hot roll mix. Add the grated orange peel to dry mix. Let rise according to package directions.
2. When dough has doubled and has been kneaded lightly, cut off small pieces of dough. Into each, insert a jellied-orange piece. Form dough around orange piece to seal.
3. Deep fry at 365°F. While still warm, brush with the Orange Glaze and serve.

About 4 doz. doughnuts

Orange Glaze

Blend 2 tablespoons undiluted frozen orange juice concentrate, ½ teaspoon vanilla extract, 4 drops yellow food coloring, and 2 drops red food coloring into 1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar in a bowl. Beat until smooth.

Funnel Cakes

1¼ cups flour
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 egg, beaten
⅔ cup milk

1. Blend the first four ingredients.
2. Beat the egg and milk together. Add gradually to dry ingredients, beating constantly until batter is smooth.
3. Holding finger over bottom of a funnel having a ⅜- to ½-in. hole, fill funnel with batter. Hold funnel as near surface of heated fat as possible; remove finger and drop batter into 375°F. fat, using a circular movement from center outward to form a spiral cake about 3 in. in diameter. Immediately replace finger on bottom of funnel; then form other cakes (as many as will float uncrowded).
4. Fry until cakes are puffy and golden brown, turning once. Remove with a slotted spoon and drain over fat for a few seconds before removing to absorbent paper. Sift confectioners' sugar lightly over cakes and serve warm.

2 to 2½ doz. cakes

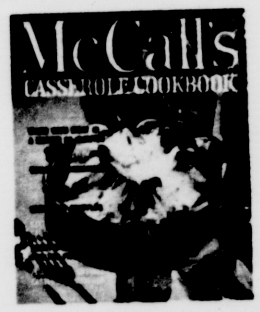

Deep-Fried Apple Pies

Prepare in advance and store in refrigerator until just before frying.

Pastry for 2-crust pie
3 cups sliced pared tart apples
½ cup water
1 teaspoon lemon juice
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon ground nutmeg
Butter or margarine

1. Shape pastry into two balls. Using one ball at a time, flatten on a lightly floured surface and roll out ⅛ in. thick. Cut out rounds using a 3½-in. cutter; set aside.
2. Put apples into a saucepan; add water and lemon juice. Cover tightly and cook over low heat 15 min., or until tender.
3. Remove from heat; drain. Lightly mix in a blend of sugar and spices.
4. Place about 2 tablespoons apple mixture onto each pastry round; dot with butter or margarine. Moisten one half of the edge of each round with water to help form a tight seal. Fold the other half of round over filling. Press edges together with a fork. Be sure to seal to avoid leakage of filling while frying.
5. Lower pies into 375°F. fat; add only as many as will float uncrowded in fat. Deep fry about 3 min., or until golden brown. Turn pies as they rise to surface and several times during cooking.
6. Remove with a slotted spoon and drain over fat before removing to absorbent paper. Serve warm sprinkled with confectioners' sugar.

Parents Also Have Growing Pains

My wife and I once thought it wise,
In trying to economize,
To buy our son too large a fit
And hope he'd soon grow into it.

But I don't think it's helped at all.
(He's 15 now, and six feet tall.)
Oh, he grows into it—but then
Just overnight grows out again!

The Light That Failed

I was just thinking...®

WATT DIDN'T HAPPEN today is one of the most ohminous experiences I've had in quite a spell.

The lights went out.

They not only went out on me, they went out on everybody in town, everybody in the state, and everybody in a whole grid of states. (A grid is something that has something to do with the boys plugging in the electricity so it runs around in all directions and comes out everywhere —or nowhere.)

I was sitting at the typewriter in my office and minding my own business. It would have been a far better thing had I been minding the power company's business. My office has no windows, and it is about the size of a large gymnasium. It is also electrically heated and air-conditioned. That is, it was.

A few matches were lighted off across the office, and then someone held a cigarette lighter so I could see to dial the phone. But it wouldn't dial anything except a nervous novice who kept telling me what time it was without even trying to sell me a princess phone or chimes.

Fortunately, no one was trapped in the elevator. It is a small, coffin-sized box which has a nervous breakdown if a piece of thread falls into its runners. If I had been in the elevator, I would have had the nervous breakdown myself and been buried in it.

As time ticked off (on wrist watches only), a hush hung over the city. Traffic signals went blind, restaurant coffee went cold, and customers went soggy-haired home from the beauty shops.

It's a fine kettle of fuses when civilization grows so dependent on things like amps and volts that a mouse gnawing a light cord in Biloxi can black out the business of Boise. And it didn't take four and 20 blackbirds baked up in a power line last week to put half our town into mourning becomes nonelectric. It took just one.

On the basis that the animal kingdom knows something the rest of us don't, I'm preparing myself for the next emergency. I've made arrangements at the aquarium.

Let those who will rely on Reddy Kilowatt. I'm cooking on the front burner with Eddy Eel.

HOW TO Cope with Crises

In most cases, there's no such thing as an unsolvable personal problem, says this family-living expert—provided you know what to do and when to do it

By CLARK W. BLACKBURN

General Director, Family Service Association of America

as told to Bill Surface

TEN-YEAR-OLD WARREN brought in the morning newspaper. His mother, whom we'll call Mrs. Lillian Simpson, pushed it off the bed. Her crisis, she thought, was worse than anything in the headlines.

Mrs. Simpson had just come home from the hospital. She had given birth prematurely to a four-pound daughter, who barely survived and now required 24-hour care. But Mrs. Simpson also had undergone major surgery and couldn't care for the baby, and her husband could take no more time off from work. She had to keep Warren out of school during his final exams to help with the other children.

"But now he'll fail, and the other children are going to hurt themselves," she cried. "And the new baby's liable to die!"

Similarly, many Americans face personal crises that they feel have only one outcome: imminent disaster. Such crises are increasing in today's complex age. Last year more than 400,000 families brought their problems to the 325 member agencies of the Family Service Association of America. In seeking answers, our professionally trained social-work counselors have found that most personal crises are not insoluble. Mrs. Simpson's plight is only one of many examples in our files.

After a sleepless first night, she telephoned the hospital and was told about our nonprofit homemaker service. The local Family Service agency provided an agency-trained homemaker to serve temporarily as a "substitute mother." Within two weeks, the baby passed the danger stage, and Mrs. Simpson had resumed her regular routine.

Mrs. Simpson could have minimized her initial anxiety if she had developed an invaluable resource: knowing how to cope with crises. The most difficult part of a crisis is the period of indecision—whether to fight, how to fight, or whether just to run away.

To stay and fight successfully requires both strength and practicality. Therefore, I've selected actual case histories that may provide insight if you face a crisis.

Jobless: Marvin Whitman had been a self-styled "supervisor" at a Midwest electrical firm for three years. Then his boss told Marvin, "I'll have to let you go."

Impulsively, Marvin sold the family's furniture, left bills unpaid, and drove his wife and their two preschool children to Los Angeles. But he had no leads and no "big" job offers. Most landlords wouldn't rent to an unemployed man without a large deposit. And he hadn't lived in California long enough to qualify for unemployment compensation.

What happened? The Whitmans returned to the Midwest to live with her parents but found that his so-called "bad breaks" continued until he applied for agency aid. After several interviews, Marvin was helped to understand that he had applied for jobs for which he couldn't qualify, oversold himself ("I practically ran the place"), and foolishly explained the long gap from his last job as "being in business for myself." He was encouraged to sell part time on commission while he looked for permanent work. Now less tense, he was hired by a mail-order house.

Marvin's experience is a good example of what not to do—whether you have lost a job through dismissal, automation, or business failure. What he should have done is read the Labor Department's Occupational Outlook Handbook, The American Worker's Fact Book, or trade papers available in local libraries; then sort out pros and cons of a move and make a careful decision with his wife.

It's best, too, to write a one-page résumé that describes what jobs you have done, what you can and like to do, and why you feel you can do certain jobs. Ask neighbors, relatives, and friends about job possibilities where they work. Canvass all new businesses or factories. Set a weekly goal on the number of applications and, if unsuccessful, investigate whether retraining would augment your job chances.

Financial: Leroy and Janet Bland had lived in an inexpensive rural area. When he got a big-city factory job at $135 a week, they found installment buying could fulfill their dreams: a new car, color television, a home freezer, and bicycles for all three children. "Only $139 a month," the Blands would say.

But soon the first of a month seemed to appear every other day. Threats of lawsuits and garnishments drove them to high-interest loans. Creditors hounded them. The wife, verging on a nervous breakdown, told neighbors, "They'll put me in an asylum and take my kids!"

Mrs. Bland sought help from a family agency. She blamed her family's dilemma on bad luck and Leroy's spending. "He just got himself a hunting coat and shotgun," she complained. What did she do? She punished him by buying herself a movie camera! Significantly, the Blands are no isolated example. The American Association of Marriage Counselors says money problems cause more divorces and separations than "other women" ever do.

Financial crises are best met by the type of program the agency worked out with the Blands. Sell extravagant items. Never run. Go to the employees' credit union for advice. Notify creditors that you can "pay this much a month" until the debt is erased. All of your creditors might not agree, but the consequences are less severe than if they had to find you.

Reach a realistic understanding of purchasing power. First, pay all living expenses. You can pay the money that is left toward credit plans, but remember you can't have everything at once.

Problem Child: Mrs. James Anderson cried as she told the caseworker that her seven-year-old son Bobby seemed "emotionally disturbed."

Interviews revealed that she helped Bobby dress, wash, and brush his teeth. The only thing he ever completed alone was a model airplane. And she never told her husband about Bobby's school failure. "Daddy's got enough to worry about without adding more," she would say.

He did. Mr. Anderson had been promoted to sales supervisor and frantically drove salesmen to equal his rigid standards. At home, he denounced his "rat race," yelled to regain authority, and demanded that he "check and perfect" Bobby's homework.

After counseling, Mr. Anderson decided to return to his former position with slightly reduced pride and salary—but with lessened pressure, which resulted in a smoother home life. Bobby was allowed to do things independently of his parents, and his problems eased.

Since juvenile crises have grown disturbingly, I feel parents should understand this: apart from education, don't expect everything from schools. We've found that potential school dropouts and delinquents must be detected at home. Another thing: if you feel your child has a problem, don't just hope he'll "outgrow it." Seek professional help and be prepared to make some adjustments yourself because the real problem may be partly a result of your actions and attitudes.

These examples don't, of course, cover all crisis areas. But these steps can help:

■ 1. A situation that pyramids into a crisis often can be prevented if you regularly pose this courageous question: if I keep doing this, where will it lead?

■ 2. When a crisis does occur, get organized and determine immediately what choices you have. Sometimes, such as when told to anticipate a lengthy illness, your choices of action are limited. So, forlorn as it sounds, rehearse for reality and prepare for the worst. But in other situations you can stop talking about the "worst" and act for the best.

■ 3. When possible, try to make a cautious decision about a drastic move that you may later regret. For example, a grocery-store owner retired at 65 only to have his wife die suddenly. Next he suffered a ruptured blood vessel in an eye. He was about to give his life savings to an unlicensed home to care for him permanently. Instead, we helped him enter a nursing home on a monthly basis. Soon his eyesight and confidence were restored, and he found he need not live permanently among the ill. He still had his savings, so he moved to a small apartment. "I'm alive again," he remarked recently.

■ 4. Seek professional guidance. No crisis is beyond discussion. Most would-be suicides have been prevented, psychiatrists find, when the person analyzed his problems with an experienced counselor. And don't feel that you're violating our American heritage of self-reliance if you turn to a voluntary agency.

■ 5. If your area doesn't have a Family Service agency (they are free or charge a nominal fee, depending on income), call your United Fund, Community Chest, or clergyman. You can find assistance in arranging for an elderly relative's care, in providing someone to take care of your house while you're hospitalized, or in giving professional guidance in crises. Above all, these agencies guarantee that in your crisis you are not alone. ◆

WAIT! I'LL PICK A MARK --AND WHEN HE MISSES I'LL DO THE BEATING!

OH YES, SIR! NOW WITH YOUR LEAVE--

OVER THERE--THE HART WHICH STANDS APART FROM THAT HERD. CAN YOU EVEN SHOOT THAT FAR?

AS THE ARROW FLIES TRUE TO ITS MARK THE BULLIES SHRINK FROM RESPONSIBILITY AND HIDE BEHIND LOUD WORDS.

YOU KILLED THE KING'S DEER!

A CAPITAL OFFENSE!

BUT, GOOD SIRS, 'TWAS THE MARK YOU SET FOR ME!

YOUR TONGUE CLACKS TOO READILY AND COULD MAKE TROUBLE, SO I'LL SILENCE IT FOREVER!
